Municipal Elections.

BOROUGH OF PETERSHAM.

EXTRAORDINARY VACANCY,

SOUTH KINGSTON WARD.

NOTICE is hereby given that the following gentlemen have been duly Nominated to the office of ALDERMAN for the South Kingston Ward of the above Borough, to fill the extraordinary vacancy caused by the resignation of Alderman William Hilson Pigott:—

BENJAMIN JAMES, Jun., Wholesale Grocer and Produce Merchant, Cambridge-street
JOHN GELDING, Nurseryman, Canterbury Road
WILLIAM HENRY BULLOCK, Plumber and Gasfitter, Stanmore Road.

The POLLING for the Election of one of the above gentlemen to serve as Alderman will be taken on SATURDAY, the 6th March instant, commencing at 8 o'clock a.m., and closing at 3 o'clock p.m.

Polling Place: Council-chambers, corner of the Stanmore Road and Crystal-street, in the said Ward.

The Official Declaration will be made at the above polling place on MONDAY, the 8th instant, at 8 o'clock a.m.

M. M'MAHON, Returning-Officer.

Council-chambers, Petersham, 2nd March, 1880.

SOUTH KINGSTON WARD ELECTION.

NOTICE is hereby given that, in accordance with the 52nd Section of the Municipalities Act, NO PERSON other than the Person who actually PAID the RATES, will be ALLOWED to VOTE.

M. M'MAHON, Returning-Officer.

Council-chambers, Petersham, 2nd March, 1880.

ASHFIELD—South Ward.—CLISSOLD has been compelled to resign, his nomination being informal. How was it the Returning-Officer did not uphold the objections taken at the nomination? Because he wanted Clissold's vote for Mayor.

SIX HUNDRED and FIFTEEN POUNDS (£615) of the ratepayer's money paid for a site for a Town Hall to one Elphinstone, who bought from Alderman Clissold.

OVER £70.—SEVENTY POUNDS paid for plans for a Town Hall! So much waste paper, and not a decent footpath in the Borough. Ratepayers, is this sort of work to be perpetuated!

VOTE for J. W. WATKIN, and break up the RING. Vote for J. W. WATKIN and respectability.

Borough Council Notices.

BOROUGH OF WOOLLAHRA.

The amended Code of BY-LAWS having received the sanction of his Excellency the Governor, are now in force. Copies may be seen at the Council-chambers, and purchased at a charge of 3d. per Copy.

By order of the Mayor.

SAMUEL SYMONDS, Council Clerk.

Council-chambers, 30th January, 1880.

BOROUGH OF WATERLOO.

NOTICE.—Raglan-street, from Pitt-street to the Wesleyan Church, Mount Lachlan, will be closed to traffic pending repairs, till further notice.

By order of the Mayor.

CHAS. HARRIS, Council Clerk.

March 1st, 1880.

SYDNEY INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.

The attendance at the Garden Palace yesterday was as follows:—Season tickets, 340; general public, 2314; children, 285; exhibitors and attendants, 742; Royal's band, 10; total, 3691.

In reference to a paragraph which appeared in our issue of the 24th ultimo, to the effect that we understood that South Australia had received more awards in the wine department than any other colony, Mr. Alexander Munro, of Bebeah, Singleton, writes:—

"I would submit that the above announcement is as yet rather premature, as the wines of New South Wales have not been tasted. I received a letter yesterday from Mr. Morris, the Secretary of the Exhibition, requesting me to withdraw some of my wines from competition (no doubt the same request has been made to all the New South Wales exhibitors), as the judges say the samples are too numerous for them to go through before the closing of the Exhibition. The letter is dated 24th February."

Mr. Munro explains that his reason for writing is that the paragraph referred to might be prejudicial to the New South Wales wine interests.

The band of the New South Wales Artillery will perform the following programme in the Garden Palace this afternoon:—March, "Strangers yet," Claribel; valse, "Happy Thoughts," R. De Lacy; selection, "Pinafore," Sullivan; quadrille, "The Tourist," Signor Grasner; valse, "Casino Tanze," Gung'l; selection, "Grand Duchess," Offenbach; galop, "Maskin," L. Oertel.

The following telegram from the Melbourne Exhibition Commission was received yesterday by the Sydney Exhibition Commission:—

"Custom-house, Melbourne, 2nd March, 1880.

"To the Hon. P. A. Jennings, Esq., C.M.G.

"Cannot receive exhibits before 1st July, and then only on condition that space has been allotted and exhibits consigned to the Commissioner of the country to which the exhibits belong. "T. B. HILL, Acting-Secretary."

In reference to this telegram, the Secretary to the Sydney Exhibition Commission writes:—

"One great difficulty in the way of exhibitors retaining their goods at the Garden Palace until the extended closing date of the Exhibition (20th April) is completely removed. Attention might also be drawn to the fact that, after the 20th April, the Executive Commissioner will allow exhibitors free storage at the Garden Palace until goods can be removed to Melbourne."

The Secretary to the Exhibition Commission has received from Captain Matthieu a letter, of which the following is a translation:—

"Sydney, 2nd March, 1880.

"M. le Secrétaire,—Yesterday evening's journals and those of this morning publish a letter which I had the honour to address to you on the 28th February, in reply to yours of the previous evening, in which you inform me of the decision to keep the Exhibition open till the 20th of April.

"Permit me to express regret that you should have given such publicity to my letter, in which I speak of objections raised by some of my colleagues—objections which I thoroughly understand, and in which I would have concurred if certain happy circumstances had not justified me in putting aside my private feelings in order that the very legitimate wishes of a number of your fellow-citizens might be carried into effect.

"I would esteem it a favour if you would give the same publicity to this letter.

"Deign to accept.

"C. MATHIEU, Commissaire-General."

THE INTERNATIONAL AGRICULTURAL SHOW.

The agricultural show, which was intended by the Commission of the International Exhibition to be a general display of all and every product of the land of all the colonies, opened yesterday in the Agricultural Hall, Garden Palace grounds, and from its present appearance can only be regarded as moderately successful. The circulars to invite exhibits were forwarded to nearly all quarters from which support might be expected some two or three months back, but the substantial responses to these invitations have not been as numerous as the friends of agriculture might desire. Queensland and South Australia have afforded good assistance, but other colonies of the group have either held back or only forwarded a few commodities. Even this colony is weakly represented, and thus it is that the show, which was expected to fill the Agricultural Hall, does not more than occupy one-half that structure. Notwithstanding this, the display is very interesting, and doubtless, as many of the exhibits are from industries which are yet in their infancy, will be educational and useful. The efforts of the Commission have so far succeeded, that many worthy exhibits which were scarcely inspected in the Garden Palace are brought prominently into notice; and although the show is not large, nor the list of exhibits quite complete, a couple of hours may be well spent during the next few weeks inside the Agricultural Hall.

One-half the Hall is still taken up by the wool exhibits; it is in the end near the Hyde Park gate that the present show is held. Entering the central door of the building, the first object likely to attract a visitor's attention is a neat case, shaped as Cleopatra's Needle, the exhibit of Mr. Affleck, the sericulturist of Albury. This, which is one of the Garden Palace gems, is well stored with Australian silk in a raw state, and in nearly all forms. Near this, in the centre of the Hall, there is a choice collection of plants from the Botanic Gardens; and next these springs to a great height Mr. M'Pherson's great trophy of Australian fibres, a noteworthy exhibit. Further on there are plants, and a very neat cereal trophy from South Australia. On either side of these exhibits stand tables containing seeds, plants, and collections of agricultural produce, and along the sides and end vegetables, fruits, and cereals have place. The show of fruit is remarkably good, the vegetables and roots but middling, and the cereals good, but not yet in sufficient strength to be fairly representative of Australia's power to produce breadstuffs. The arrangements so far are satisfactory, but would be more praiseworthy if the show had been complete before it was opened. It is not well to have off shows held in a straggling fashion, or that visitors should be told more exhibits are expected, Mr. Gideon S. Lang who now has entire charge of the Agricultural Department has worked assiduously to render the show successful, and it does appear that exhibitors have been fairly and courteously treated by this gentleman. Mr. Davenport, the Commissioner for South Australia; Mr. Layton, the secretary of the Queensland Commission; Mr. C. R. Bedwell of the Spring Hill Farmers Union, Mr. Kesterton of the South Coast, Mr. De Courcy Browne of the Mudgee Farmers' Association, and Messrs. Hall, Prince, and Co., deserve more than a few words of praise for their efforts to bring together a creditable display of produce, and a few horticulturists have rendered valuable service.

About 50 exhibits of wheat are catalogued, but some of these are yet on the way. The greater part of the lots exhibited are of this season, and are very fine samples. The Spring Hill Farmers' Union have five bags samples of the wheat thrashed by the machines at the late trials of Exhibition machines, and the straw from which this wheat came is also shown. The exhibit is creditable to the Union, and to Mr. Worboys, from whose farm it came. The Spring Hill Union also sends wheat from the farms of Messrs. Crowson, Goods, Ezzy, Baker, Slattery, and Fitzgerald. Messrs. Browne and Rowe, of Macquarie Plains, place good wheat. Mr. Macansh [sic] of Murrumburrah, Mr. Buchanan of Denman, are well represented; and Mudgee stands well with about a score of first-class samples from the farms of Messrs. Bucholtz, Page, Hurtz, Gawthorne, Quinn, Hunt, Dickson and Son, Page, J. H. Cox, J. Lee, B. Gawthorne, jun., Randall, Purves, Wurth, Keith, Quinn, Bennett, and George Rouse. South Australia has sheafs and bags of red straw, Brodie's Prolific, Rattling Jack, Highland, Nonpareil, Forbes, proper and purple straw. The bags of white Lammas, Tuscan, and proper, shown by South Australia, are well worthy of close inspection.

A sample bag of mammoth rye, grown by Mr. Richardson, of Spring Hill, where 1 acre yielded 100 bushels of this cereal, is rather a curiosity. Mr. Pemell shows a nice collection of cereals—oats, wheat, and barley; Mr. M'Canah, of Murrumburrah, places some excellent malting barley, and Mr. Webb, of Mudgee, some good Cape barley. There are several samples of the skinless variety of barley, but these are not likely to prove very attractive, whereas more Cape and malting would be very acceptable.

The display of maize is very meagre, but some good samples are shown; of these, the most noteworthy are—Mr. Taylor's of Illawarra, Messrs. Wren, Gowing, Jauncey, Darcy, P. H. Woods of Bega, B. Conlon of Windsor, and Mr. Greenwood of Queensland; has placed five samples of maize and some flour and wheat. The general exhibits of flour were not quite ready for inspection, but some very good lots were on the tables. Some bread is on the road coming from Mudgee, and Mr. A. Shadler, of the North Shore, has a stand of what appears to be first-class bread, made solely from home grown flour. There is but one sample of butter. This comes from Mr. C. Cannon, of Waverley, and is admirably got up.

The show of potatoes is very small. Mr. M'Cullum, of Goulburn, and Mr. Hewitt, of Denman, place good lots; and Mr. Herriott, of Kogorah, shows eleven fine varieties. Mr. F. J. Dengage, of Camden, places some fair looking mangels, sample of a forty-acre crop, grown in dark loam.

The south is represented by what may be termed a trophy of hay, placed by Messrs. Hall, Prince, and Co. The trusses being from the farms of Mr. David Broadhead, of Inverary Park, Bungonia, and Mr. E. Tickner, of Bungonia. The oaten and wheaten hay shown here are of first-class quality; and some oaten and wheaten chaff, placed for Mr. C. Atkins, of Bathurst, are also worthy of critical inspection.

Mr. W. B. Campbell, of Flushcome, Blacktown, shows an excellent collection of garden products, among which are forty varieties of gourds, and fourteen varieties of maize; a monster sunflower fourteen inches in diameter, peas, and many seeds; with these are jars of grape jelly, and mixed pickles, which have been most carefully preserved.

Among the special exhibits are fifty dried specimens of saltbush, from Baron F. Von Mueller, of Melbourne. Numerous as these are they do not represent more than one-half of the Baron's collection of the salt bushes of Australia.

One of the most important features in the show is the magnificent display of economic plants contributed by the Acclimatisation Society of Queensland, of which the following is a list:—Custard apple, sapodilla plum, antiaris macrophylla, kei apple, algaroba, bread fruit, jack fruit, arrowroot, scoetrine aloes, Barbadoes aloes, caramba, cashew nut, mahwah tree, anatto, Cape almond, whampee, chulan, carob, Cape chestnut, Cape plum, peccan nut, hickory nuts, caoutchouc-producing plants, nutmeg, clove, cinnamon, cassia, bark, durian, mangosteen, garcinia Livingstoni, garcinia, sp. (from Honolulu); Chinese raisin, langsat, moustera delicious, mango, horseradish tree, litchi, peppers, allspice, alligator pear, Chinese walnut, Viapple, Chinese date plum, cocoa, tea, Paraguay tea, coffee, turmeric, physic nut, ipecacuanha, madder, strychnine, cochin gorke, jujube, ginger, vanilla, ironwood of Brazil, sago plants, tagasaste, Davidsonia plum, gum copal, cockes glaucescens, Brazilian cherry, rose apple, supatorium riparum, fibraurea tinctoria, Indian plum, Sherbet shrubs, rosella, logwood, Manilla tamarind, ivi, or Tahitian chestnut, Malay apple, Calumba root, krempferia galanga, sugar-mat plants, passion fruits, Himalayan blackberry, gum benzoin, Chinese water nut "Ling," Vos-Vanga, Pawpaw apple, Queensland nut, ivory palm, "guango" (rain tree), guava, star apple, sweet potato spe., tallow tree, wax tree, loquat, indigo, Indian pith-hat plant, edible acorn, Manilla hemp, sand box tree, date spe., and wine palm. In reference to these plants, Mr. L. A. Bernays, the vice-president of the society, writes:—

"The list comprises such plants only as happened to be available when the society was invited to exhibit, a few weeks before the date fixed for the Show; and does not exhaust the list of plants, of various economic values, in the society's grounds. Of the large majority of those shown, there are stocks available for distribution among the members of the society; while of others in the list, and of many at present too tender to exhibit, plants will be fit for distribution towards the end of present year. The exhibit is intended to illustrate the work of Plant Acclimatisation, which is the leading aim of the society, and which it has been carrying on for years; and, although by no means exhaustive of its capabilities, will serve to show the practical character of the society's transactions. Recent special investigation abundantly proves that this work—although in its very nature slow—by the steady persistency with which it has been carried on, has already considerably varied and increased the products of the gardens of Queensland, and gives distinct promise at no distant future of adding to the material resources of the colony."

Several samples of arrowroot, an article of export from Queensland, are exhibited, and there are also about twenty varieties of sugar from the Brisbane, Maryborough, Mackay, and Logan districts. The last season has been a most favourable one for this industry, and sugar is now largely exported from Queensland. The samples of coffee, beans, and tea show that both can be grown in Queensland, but their production is not yet a prominent industry.

Mr. Hill, of the Botanic Gardens, Brisbane, contributes largely to the success of the show with grasses and plants, which will receive notice in a future report.

Mr. A. M'Pherson, of Brisbane, places some collections of fibres which call for special attention. The Moreton Bay fig jute, Hibiscus heterophyllus, Corchorus capsularus, Hibiscus sorbifolia, Oleo turis, and Sida retusa furnish Mr. M'Pherson with the raw material, from which he manufactures some bales and samples of fibres which should prove marketable. With these he places 92 varieties of grass seeds, 14 varieties of rice, and several other exhibits which are worthy of prizes.

Mr. Way, Curator of the Botanic Gardens, Toowoomba, sends grasses and grass seeds; and Queensland is also represented by several exhibitors of novelties, which require more than a brief sketch such as this can afford.

Mr. J. C. Johansen, of the North Shore, places a case illustrative of sericulture; and Mr. Dignam of New Zealand, also places some specimens of the silk industry. Mr. Bryant, of Liverpool, shows some paper made from maize fibre, after his patent in 1874; also, the first sheet of paper made in the colony. Several exhibits of cinchona appear, but these have been noticed in the reports of the Garden Palace exhibits. A collection of dried and bottled fruits and pickles from Mr. Mark Winter, of West Maitland, is one of the best features of the show. The fruits are well prepared, and Mr. Winters' exhibits throughout show that great care has been bestowed on their manufacture.

Mr. W. J. Dangar, of Neotafield, Singleton, well deserves the medal which has been awarded to him for his fine collection of 48 varieties of grasses and plants forwarded, growing in pots, just as they appear in his land at Singleton. These interesting exhibits are all carefully labelled, and a description appears with each. The good and the bad grasses, the weeds and the useful plants are all defined, and a lesson can be learned easily by spending half an hour over these exhibits. The veteran agriculturist, Sir William Macarthur, places some fine plants of the black sorghum, maize, millet, and planter's friend, and there is a very large collection of seeds from the French Court of the Garden Palace. The judging of fruits and plants was completed yesterday, but the cereals and other agricultural branches of the show will not be judged until several days have elapsed. The hall was closed until 2 p.m. yesterday, to allow the judges ample space to perform their duties. After that hour the public flocked in in fair numbers, and several exhibits were critically examined, and seemed to afford satisfaction.

It is not yet known how long the exhibits will remain, but probably some date for closing will be mentioned shortly by the Commission.

The display of fruits, flowers, and plants is, perhaps, the only complete section of the show as yet, and the display is certainly a very creditable one. The winner of the gold medal for the best collection of fruit is Mr. W. Stieme, who exhibits upwards of 120 varieties of fruit. The vines (in full bearing), which have been temporarily placed in pots, attracted a good deal of attention, one being an eight-year-old black Hamburgh, and the other a six-year-old vine of the Sauvignon Cindre species. Mr. Grunsell, who took second prize and silver medal, has a very fine collection, including the Ripstone Pippin apple, Marie Louise pear, Brown Fontinac grape, Magnum Bonum plum, &c. The varieties of red and yellow Italian peaches exhibited by Mr. A. Hewitt, of Ferndale, were very fine, and attracted a considerable amount of attention. Mr. W. Scott, of Murrumburrah, exhibits among other fruit, a new kind of apple raised by him at Corrowong Creek, and said to be a first-class kitchen and dessert apple, a good bearer, and of vigorous growth and keeps till Christmas. Mr. Scott's Ripstone Pippins are very fine. Mr. Buckholts, of Fredericksburgh, Mudgee, exhibits a collection of five varieties of apples and one of pears, all of excellent quality. There is a small collection of tropical fruits exhibited by Mr. W. Brown, of Paddington, comprising guavas, pomegranates, diospyrus kaki, &c. We may also make special reference to specimens of diospyros kaki (date plum), grown by Mr. P. R. Donaldson, at Grafton, and exhibited by H. A. Volekers, nurseryman and seedsman, in Grafton. In the collection of fruits shown by Mrs. S. Campbell, of Gladesville, there are some very fine quinces of large growth. Mr. Squire W. Pye made the list of prizes for the best collection of apples, and he has also splendid fruit of other kinds, and citrons. One of the exhibits is the winter Juneating apple which, Mr. Pye states, "ripens during March and April, will keep longer than any other variety, is the best dessert apple in the colony, and the tree is an abundant bearer." A word of praise is also due to Mr. Pye for the trouble and thoughtfulness displayed in having each exhibit accompanied by a short written statement of the name and nature of the fruit and the purposes for which it can best be used.

The only exhibits that have been judged as yet are the fruit, flowers, plants, &c., in connection with which the judges have made the following awards:—

PRUITS, FLOWERS, AND PLANTS.

Miscellaneous collection fruit—Mr. Stieme, 1st, gold medal; Mr. Thomas Grunsell, 2nd, silver medal.
Collection of apples—Mr. S. W. Pye, 1st, silver medal; Mr. Thomas Grunsell, 2nd, bronze medal; Mr. F. Bucholtz, commended.
Collection of peaches—Mr. T. A. Hewitt, silver medal.
Collection of pears—Mr. F. Bucholts, commended.
Collection of oranges, lemons, and preserves—Mr. S. W. Pye, bronze medal.

NON-COMPETITIVE FRUIT.

Collection of fruit—Mr. Scott, of Murrumburrah, special prize, silver medal.
Collection of fruit—Mrs. W. S. Campbell, Gladeswille, bronze medal.
Collection of tropical fruits—Mr. H. A. Voelekers, Grafton, silver medal.
Bouquets of native flowers—Miss Julia Sherland, certificate of merit.
Amorphophallus Campanulatus—Mr. George Mortimore, highly commended.
Fruit of Indian fig (Opuntia ficus Indica)—Mr. W. J. Dangar, Singleton, highly commended.
Collection of indigenous grasses and fodder plants—1st prize, silver medal, Mr. W. J. Dangar. The judges highly commended this very instructive exhibit.
Collection of coleus—1st prize, Mr. J. H. Newman, bronze medal and certificate. Note: Exceedingly well-grown plants.
Miscellaneous collection of plants—Mr. Johnston, highly commended.
Sheep burnet, seed and plants (palerium sangues orba) Mr. D. H. Campbell, Murrumburrah, certificate of merit. Note: The judges highly commended the exhibit as a valuable sheep fodder plant.
New variegated Rhynchos permum—Mr. Stieme, highly commended.

NON-COMPETITIVE.

Miscellaneous collection of plants—Sydney Botanic Gardens, Mr. Charles Moore, director, gold medal. Note: In this magnificent collection the judges note the following superb new plants from the South Sea Islands:—Curcuma (sp.), Heliconia aurea-striata, Heliconia rubra-striata, Dracæna Turnerii, Maranta Turnerii, Crinum variegatum, Microlepia hirta-cristata, Dicksonia (sp.), Tillandsia tesselata, &c., &c.
Collection of economic plants and tropical fruits—The Acclimatisation Society, Queensland, Mr. L. A. Bernays, secretary, gold medal. Note: The judges desire to highly commend the very extensive and interesting collection of economic plants.
Collection of economic plants and fruits—The Brisbane Botanic Gardens, Mr. W. Hill, director, gold medal. Note: The judges desire specially to commend this most extensive, interesting, and valuable collection, being the largest yet exhibited in New South Wales.
Collection tropical fruit—Mr. W

NEW SOUTH WALES PARLIAMENT.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

TUESDAY, MARCH 2.

Mr. SPEAKER took the chair at twenty-nine minutes past 4 o'clock.

QUESTIONS.

Mr. LACKEY, in reply to Mr. Burns (for Mr. Fitzpatrick), said the road-officer at Goulburn had been instructed to prepare plans of Clinton-street, Goulburn. The work was not on a main road, but on a portion of an important road, and a feeder to the railway. The proposed works were to be carried out by the Council, to whom would be given a sum of money to carry out the work on its own responsibility. One objection had been lodged, and the Council had been threatened with an action by Mr. Horn.

Mr. HOSKINS, in reply to Mr. M'Elhone, gave information respecting the conditional purchase of Mrs. W. Lamb.

Mr. WISDOM, in reply to Mr. M'Elhone, said there were two regulations in respect to the privilege of grazing stock on commons, but they were confined to the pasturage of horses and cattle, and not of travelling stock. The period allowed at any one time was three days. He could not trace any reference to these regulations in the reported decisions of the Supreme Court.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply to Mr. Dangar, said no election of trustees of the Narrabri Common appeared to have been held since trustees were appointed by the Government in 1877, to hold office until January 1, 1880. No regulations had been submitted by the trustees. Nominations of trustees could be made up to January, 1883.

Mr. BAKER, in reply to Mr. Bennett, gave information respecting an application of Mr. Falconer for vacant Crown land.

Mr. WISDOM, in reply to Mr. Burns, for Mr. Farnell, said he had heard that a decision had been given by the Privy Council in Robertson v. Day, but no official report of such decision had reached his office. When it did he would lay it on the table of the House.

Mr. HOSKINS, in reply to Mr. Bennett, gave particulars respecting the cancellation of a portion of the Walcha town common.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply to Mr. Bennett, said the gaol warders were supplied with cutlasses, and some of them with revolvers. For the police the old regulation arms were the Terry and Calisher breech-loading carbines and Colt's navy revolvers. These are being replaced by Henry breech-loading central-fire carbines, and Adams's breech-loading revolvers, of which a number has already been supplied, and a further large consignment has been ordered from England. When these are received the old regulation arms will be transferred for gaol use, for which they will be very serviceable. The Inspector-General of Police represented that improved arms were necessary, and the Government approved of the supply. The Comptroller-General of Prisons concurred in the proposed arrangement for the transfer of the police arms to his department.

PETITIONS.

Mr. BARBOUR presented a petition from the inhabitants of the southern parts of New South Wales in reference to pastoral reserves, praying that the law may be altered in regard to them.

Mr. GREENWOOD presented a petition from the Sydney Tramway and Omnibus Company, praying to be heard by counsel at the bar of the House, in reference to their bill for the construction of tramways in the city and suburbs.

The petitions were received.

TRAFFIC AT MURRUMBURRAH.

Mr. GARRETT moved that there be laid upon the table of this House a return showing,—"1. The extent of the local passenger traffic from Murrumburrah platform since its erection, contrasted with that of Murrumburrah North, exclusive of passengers brought to the latter by Cobb and Co.'s and other coaches. 2. The like return as to goods traffic, embracing wheat, wool, live stock, and other produce, and the amount of freight charge received. 3. A copy of all official reports as to the erection of station buildings, and fixing site of station at both localities. 4. Copy of decision (if any) as to the addition of suitable station-house with proper accommodation, in combination with the buildings already erected at Murrumburrah North."

The motion was passed.

ASSISTED IMMIGRATION.

Mr. CAMERON moved,—"1. That in the opinion of this House, the depressed state of the labour market, and the financial exigencies of the colony, require that all assisted immigration should be absolutely suspended during the present year. 2. That the foregoing resolution be communicated by address to His Excellency the Governor." In moving this motion, he felt it was unnecessary to detain the House at any length, as it would be in the recollection of hon. members that he had recently moved a similar motion, and that the House was then unfortunately counted out. If he might ask a favour of hon. members on the present occasion, it was that on a matter of so much importance they would sit out the debate, and either vote for the motion or vote against it, for nothing could be more unsatisfactory than to see the House counted out upon it. While he admitted that this country was capable, under proper circumstances, of accommodating a much larger population than it had now, or was likely to have for a number of years, and while he was not one of those who wished to place a stone wall round the country, he objected to taking public funds to build an artificial bridge altogether inadequate for the traffic from elsewhere to this colony. Whatever might be the fate of this motion, the Government could depend upon it that hon. members would before long see this matter in such a crying light that they would demand that if the present system of immigration at the State's expense was to go on, it must be conducted on a footing wholly different from that upon which it was carried out at the present time. (Hear, hear.) Hon. members must know that the Government of this colony were bringing people from the mother country, and were not at the present moment able to tell where any half-dozen of them could be employed. The whole business was conducted on such a haphazard principle that the Government were satisfied with landing people on the wharfs of Sydney in the same manner as a squatter would adopt in putting 500 or 600 bullocks on his run. And it must be patent to every man that the class of immigrants we had been introducing into this country were altogether unsuited for the development of the country. All hon. members looked at this subject fairly they could not deny that it was not in the power of a man who had served a long apprenticeship to a particular trade in one of the large centres of population at home to tear himself away from that avocation when he came here, and go into the primeval forest and clear the road for others to go after him. If we were to pay for any class of immigrants at all we should try to get some of the tenant farmers of the old country here—men who would settle on our lands, and who would come with something in their pockets to battle against the hardships that inevitably met the newcomer in a strange land. Of course, every one would admit that the more bone and muscle introduced into a country the more the wealth of the country might be increased, but that result occurred only where labour was given a favourable avenue for its own development. Agents, travelling agents he presumed, or agents for districts, were appointed from the office of the Agent-General for the colony for the purpose of procuring emigrants to come out here. The Government of this country had from time to time sent home word that we did not require just then, coal miners for instance, or ironworkers, or people of that sort; but notwithstanding this, it was to the interest of these labour agents to get away as many people as they could, and when one of them met one of the industrial class whom the Government did not at that time want, he said to him, "Oh call yourself a farm labourer, and I will get you through." This was the course represented as having been pursued by Mr. Daniel Bent, whose occupation seemed to have led, in a large degree, to the dismissal of the late Agent-General; and it was only human nature that it should be so where these people were paid so much for getting emigrants away to any particular country. Another thing was this: They landed people here, and what was the result? The centres of population, such as Sydney, Newcastle, Maitland, and other places were overstocked with the particular classes of people who came, those whom they did not at the present time require, and a grievous wrong was inflicted not only on the persons brought here, but also on those of the particular class who were already here. Talk about protection; if that were not protection of capital at the expense of labour, he did not know what was. There was a cry raised about the want of servant girls. He admitted the scarcity of servant girls, but denied that the system of immigration they had been carrying out would remedy it. [An hon. member: It does not remedy it.] The cry for servant girls was just as great in the city of London, the city of New York, and other such large centres of population; in those places there was the same cry of servant-gulism. He thought this scarcity of servant girls might be accounted for in some other way. If there was no scarcity of labour existing, the State had no right to bring in more labour at the public expense. We passed a law some time ago which enabled employers by paying for the article they required to enter into such an agreement as to insure that their bargain was faithfully and properly carried out, and if he wanted a particular labourer, and it was to his advantage to have him here, he had no right to appeal to the State to bring him out, but he should bring him out at his own expense. We certainly were resorting to the protective principle if we brought out a special class for the benefit of another particular class. He had been informed that some hon. gentlemen intended to move an amendment on the motion, and he said frankly that if any amendment were proposed which would carry out the object he had in view, or endorse the spirit of this motion, he would accept it; but he had also been informed that a movement was on foot to refer this matter to a select committee. That he hoped would not be done, for it would be only shelving the question. He did not desire to detain the House any longer. His views were well known, and he only asked hon. gentlemen to consider the subject in a fair and impartial manner. He would be quite satisfied with their verdict.

Mr. BUCHANAN said that he cordially approved of the proposal for different reasons. He would not be a party to vote public money to bring immigrants here, and he had an especial objection to assisted immigration for bringing out used-up members of families. There was certainly no necessity for bringing mechanics here at the present time, because of the determination of the people to import articles made elsewhere. Our money was sent away to enrich England and America, while mechanics here were going about in idleness and want. That proposition seemed to him so plain that he was utterly at a loss to imagine how it could be controverted. There were bodies of joiners and cabinetmakers in Sydney dependent upon their labours for supplying people here with their productions. If importations were stopped, these men would get work and it would become worth people's while to have their children brought up to trades because they would be good ones. If on the contrary the Parliament looked on with utter indifference as to the well-being and prosperity of the people, and maintained a free port by which shiploads of these goods could be introduced here, how could they wonder at the people being idle. He had received innumerable letters from mechanics of late, and one of the writers stated that furniture purchased from insolvents' estates in England was sent here largely, and that if there was a glut it was stored until the glut subsided, so that the poor workers of wood who had served seven years' apprenticeship were completely checkmated. There was no prospect or hope for them. Their businesses were things of the past. The same writer affirmed that they got the furniture from America to repair. It was got up in a most slovenly, not to say unprincipled style. What chance would the workers of iron have in this country if all the locomotives, steam-engines, and agricultural machinery were imported? Idleness would be necessarily imposed upon them. They could not escape from it. The law, the folly, he might say the downright insanity, of the statesmen of the country left them no alternative. The cause of their misery was the inundation by imports admitted duty free, by which the operations of mechanics were suspended. The man who thought it his duty to call into existence everything in the shape of an industry that the country was capable of producing would see that an advalorem of twenty per cent. would give active employment to the mechanics here. If all the agricultural implements required in the colony were manufactured in Bathurst, Goulburn, or Mudgee, ample occupation would be given to the mechanics already here, and thousands besides. Look at the army of men the Government could employ in making locomotives. There were powerful illustrations in every part of the known world of the wisdom which prompted men to look after their own industries to keep their wealth within themselves, to keep the population busy. There were men of this character. Frederick the Great was one who established a system of protection that transformed his country from a desert into a place bustling with all manner of industries. He called the whole industrial force of the nation into activity, and realized for his country thereby enormous wealth and prosperity. He would ask any man whom they could dignify with the name of statesman to read the history of Canada for the last ten years. Any such man would arrive first at the conclusion that free trade had brought Canada to ruin's door, and—

Mr. M'ELHONE rose to a point of order. The hon. member was discussing free trade and protection, not the motion, and he was anticipating a motion he had on the paper for March 23rd with regard to the imposition of protective duties.

Mr. BUCHANAN said that he was arguing that there was no necessity for immigration, in consequence of there being no employment for the people who were here, and who were to arrive. Was he not permitted to do so?

The SPEAKER thought the hon. member would be at liberty to proceed to a certain extent in this direction, but he was now going beyond it, for he was discussing the question of free trade and protection. He thought it his duty to say that this motion itself was entirely out of order; it was anticipating a vote in supply, and the House would be in an awkward position if it took a decision upon the matter especially in the negative, and then have to deal with the item in committee of supply. It was contrary to the practice of Parliament to anticipate by one motion the debate upon a bill or motion or an item in supply. He had intended to stop the hon. gentleman who moved to resolution, but he thought that he would give him some consideration. He now considered it his duty to state that the motion was out of order.

Mr. CAMERON said that he would withdraw the motion.

The motion was by leave withdrawn amidst some laughter.

The House adjourned at eighteen minutes past 5 o'clock, until the usual hour the following day.

NOTICES.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—WEDNESDAY, MARCH 3.

The following is the business paper of the Legislative Council for to-day:—Government Business—Orders of the Day:—Obscene Publications Prevention Bill; second reading. Public Instruction Bill; second reading. Stamp Duties Bill; adoption of the report. Lands Acts Further Amendment Bill; to be further considered in committee. Municipal Cattle Slaughter Site Acquisition Bill; to be further considered in committee.—General Business—Notice of Motion:—Mr. Stewart to move,—"That there be laid upon the table of this House a copy of each of the printed books used by pupils during the course of education in Public schools; also, six copies of the instructions or directions given by the Council of Education to their inspectors of schools."

POLICE.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

Yesterday morning the Bench in the Crime Court was occupied by the Police Magistrate, with Messrs. Hunt, Neale, Barden, Field, Perdrian, and Bailey; and in the Summons Court, by Messrs. Smart, Fremlin, Harwood, Lipman, Calvert, and Harris.

Sarah Burke was charged with having wilfully broken two squares of glass in the window of Jeremiah O'Brien. She admitted having broken one pane, and was willing to pay for it, but denied the charge as regarded the two. Prosecutor deposed that as he lay in bed he saw the defendant break two panes of glass in his window; he valued them at 1s. each; he supposed that she broke them with a quartpot or something of that sort. To pay 2s. damages, or to be imprisoned two days.

Hugh M'Lean was summarily convicted of having stolen a cockatoo valued at 20s., the property of William Rogers, and was sentenced to be imprisoned one month.

Ann Maloney, charged with being an idle and disorderly person, having no lawful visible means of support, was sentenced to be imprisoned three months.

Louisa Trimble was charged with having a silver-plated sugar-basin and a couple of vases, the goods of Eliza Jane Hill, of Newtown. Prosecutrix deposed that about noon yesterday she missed the articles from the mantelshelf of her parlour; she valued them at 15s. The vases prisoner sold for two drinks of beer and 3d. to the wife of a publican named Hynard, and the sugar-basin was in prisoner's possession when apprehended for drunkenness. To be imprisoned seven days.

Alexander Josephs, a Greek, was summarily convicted of having stolen one shilling from the till of George Wilson, an oysterman, and was sentenced to pay a penalty of 10s., or to be imprisoned seven days.

John Connors alias O'Hear and Ann Chapman alias Mood alias Tarbuck were charged with having on the 14th ultimo feloniously wounded, with intent to do grievous bodily harm to Joseph Hayes, being then on duty as a constable of police. These parties were in the ensemble for whose participation in which John Tarbuck and three others were on Saturday committed for trial for assaulting with intent to commit grievous bodily harm upon Hampton Todd, also a constable of police. For the prosecution, evidence was give by the complainants and by constables Todd and Smith, Joseph Booth, and Anthony Pratt. Dr. Egan, having examined prosecutor, found him suffering from several wounds on the top and side of his head—true wounds; he is still suffering, but is out of danger. Committed for trial at the Central Criminal Court

William Murphy and George Reeve alias Tarbuck, were found guilty of having on the same occasion assaulted constable Hayes, and were sentenced to pay 40s. each, or to be imprisoned one month.

In the Summons Court, five publicans were fined in sums varying from 10s. to 40s. for offences against the Licensing Act; other five persons were fined in small sums up to 10s. for breaches of the Police Act: and three were fined 20s. for using words prohibited by the terms of the Vagrant Act.

At the licensing meeting the following justices took their seat:—Messrs. Smart, Calvert, O'Connor, Cameron, Hourigan, Palmer, Harris, Carpenter, Nelson, Bull, Graham, Hogan, Hardie, Kippax, Heslet, Hyam, Field, Stanley, Palser, Hill, Callaghan, M'Pherson, and Bird. Adam Newton was allowed to remove his publican's license from one house to another at the Glebe. Eight hawkers obtained licenses.

WATER POLICE COURT.

Yesterday the Water Police Magistrate and Messrs. Penfold, E. O. Smith, and Reading occupied the Bench.

William Johnson, 60, for being drunk in George-street, was fined 5s., with the alternative of two days' imprisonment; and for assaulting a constable in the execution of his duty, he was further fined 20s., or in lieu thereof ordered to go to gaol for seven days.

Michael Joseph Morley, 41, was charged by warrant with attempting to desert his wife. He was found guilty; but, in view of extenuating circumstances, was leniently dealt with, only being asked to pay 7s. 6d. a week towards her support.

In the Summons Court, before Messrs. Reading and Smith, Sydney Stewart, for illegal detention of property, belonging to one Hebar Garty, was fined 5s., with 5s. 10d. costs, or ordered to go to gaol for seven days. Mary Ann Earl, or Dutter, was summoned by Edwin Baker for wilful destruction of property, and ordered to pay a fine of 14s., or to go to gaol for one month.

LICENSING BUSINESS.—Transfers of licenses were granted from Francis Mooney to Daniel Gallagher, and from Edward Felton to William Cassidy. The application of Mary Humberstone, for a transfer of her license to John Riley, was postponed until Tuesday next. Louis Wien's application for a change of sign was recommended, and a number of hawkers' licenses, pack and foot, were also granted.

NEWTOWN POLICE COURT.

Yesterday, before Mr. William Fowler and Mr. A. Hinchcliff, the application to transfer a publican's license from John Rosler to Peter Sickle was granted.

Mr. Beaney and his colleagues present their compliments to Mr. Washington H. Soul, and regret they did not profit by the advice so often given them—viz., to attmit through the Victorian Custom-house free of duty the well-known and highly-esteemed Australian Relish, and they very sincerely hope their successors will make this question the first "question" at their "first" Cabinet meeting. LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—TUESDAY, MARCH 2.

FIRST TERM.

In Banco.—(Before their Honors Mr. Justice HARGRAVE, Mr. Justice FAUCETT, and Mr. Justice WINDEYER.)

CRAWFORD V. DOHERTY.

This motion for a rule nisi for a new trial was, after some discussion as to terms of settlement, adjourned till to-day (Wednesday).

CARTER V. COX.

The argument of this motion was also postponed.

IN RE GOODMAN AND THE REAL PROPERTY ACT.

This matter arose out of an application by Maria Rose Goodman to bring a parcel of land under the Real Property Act, to which Richard Wynne, of Mount Wilson, had filed a caveat. Under the 4th section of the Real Property Act Amendment Act (41 Vic., No. 18), a case had been filed by the applicant and also by the caveator.

Mr. C. B. Stephen now appeared for the applicant, and, after reading the cases so filed, proposed to read an affidavit to answer facts alleged in the case of the caveater.

Mr. Owen appeared for the caveator, and objected to any affidavit being read, as the section only provided for the filing of cases, and beyond those cases so filed the Court could not go.

The COURT declined to hear the affidavit read, but allowed the argument to stand over till next Tuesday, the applicant to be at liberty to amend or supplement the case filed by incorporating the facts contained in the affidavit sought to be used or otherwise, and the case so amended to be filed by Friday, the caveator to be at liberty to amend his case by Monday.

IN RE HACKETT AND THE REAL PROPERTY ACT.

This matter, which was of the same nature, was also adjourned till next Tuesday, as the case filed by the caveater had not reached the applicant.

EX PARTE JAMES FLACK.

This was a motion to make absolute a rule nisi for a writ of prohibition to be directed to Clements Lester, William Beaumont, Thomas Chapman, William Stafford, justices of the peace, and the Municipal Council of Leichhardt, to restrain them from further proceeding on a conviction or order made by the said justices against the applicant, whereby he was ordered to pay a fine of £5, and costs, upon the ground that the 36th by-law of part 3 of the by-laws of the Municipality of Leichhardt was ultra vires and illegal. The admitted facts were that the applicant was the gravedigger of the Balmain Cemetery Company, and that on the 18th of October he interred a body in that cemetery within about 25 feet of Derbyshire Road, a street within the municipality of Leichhardt. The applicant was acting as the servant of the Cemetery Company; before and since the incorporation of Leichhardt, and before and since the making and publication of the by-laws, portions of the cemetery, situated within 100 feet of Derbyshire Road, had been sold to various persons for the purpose of interring their dead, or that contracts had been made by the company with those persons to permit them to inter their dead within those portions; many bodies had been interred, and portions of the ground was still unoccupied, and in some of the portions vaults had been erected. Mr. Rogers, instructed by Messrs. Pigott and Trickett, appeared in support of the rule. The by-law in question was, "No body shall be interred within the distance of 100 feet from any public building, place of public worship, schoolroom, dwelling-house, public pathway, road, or place whatsoever within the said municipal district." That by-law had been framed under the 153rd section of the Municipalities Act of 1867, which gave the Municipal Council power to frame by-laws for "regulating the interment of the dead." It was contended that the by-law so framed was ultra vires; the Council had no right to frame a by-law in derogation of existing rights; they could only make by-laws to regulate the mode, as to time and manner, but could not prohibit burial altogether.

Mr. Pilcher, instructed by Messrs. Gannon and M'Laughlin, appeared to show cause, and contended that the by-law was reasonable, and was well within the powers conferred by the 153rd section of the Act.

The COURT, by a majority, discharged the rule without costs.

Mr. Justice HARGRAVE said that the point in question was a new one, such as would necessarily arise in the new state of things under the operation of such an Act as the Municipalities Act by which of necessity private rights were to some extent interferred with in view of the public good. The by-law in question (which his Honor read) deals altogether with matters for the public good, and public rights only were mentioned. In dealing with such a question private rights must prima facie give way to the public good. As to whether or not the interment of a body within 100 feet of a public roadway was likely to be injurious, and should be prohibited, was in the discretion of the Council who had to consider the question and deal with it. His Honor failed to see, on the face of the by-law, that it was ultra vires. All by-laws had to be read as if they were portions of and incorporated within the Act of Parliament under which they were framed; and if the substance of the present by-law had in fact formed portion of an Act, could it be said that there was anything wrong on the face of it? It was a very reasonable provision, and was not ultra vires. The 100 feet beyond the side of the cemetery could be utilised to the great advantage of the whole of the inhabitants of Leichhardt by planting an avenue of ornamental trees which would relieve the otherwise dreary aspect of the cemetery.

Mr. Justice FAUCETT regretted that he could not agree with his Honor in holding that the by-law was not ultra vires. By the 34th by-law it was enacted that no person should open any new cemetery within a distance of 100 yards from any existing cemetery within the municipality. His Honor doubted if that by-law was not ultra vires. Could it be contended that the Council of any borough or municipality had the power so to restrict the use of private lands to the advantage it might be of an existing cemetery? What right have a Council to say that no new cemetery should be opened when the Act gives them power to make by-laws for the regulating of the interment of the dead? Then followed after a by-law regulating the depth of vaults and graves, and how many bodies might be put into each grave; the by-law in question which carried out the 34th by-law to an enormous extent. The 34th by-law said that one cemetery was not to be within 100 yards from any existing cemetery—and the 36th by-law enacted that 100 feet beyond that should not be used for the purpose of burial. It seemed to his Honor that the Council were unduly interfering with private rights, and limiting the uses to which private property might be put. It was putting a restraint on those powers which had previously existed. It was, in fact, giving a retrospective effect to an Act of Parliament which ought not to be given, unless the words of the Act giving it that effect were clear and distinct. And it could not be said that any words in the 153rd section could be construed to give it a retrospective effect. Whether the by-law was reasonable or not was another question. His Honor only decided that the Municipal Council had no power to make such by-laws as the present. Various Acts of Parliament had expressly prohibited the carrying on of certain industries and manufactures within densely populated districts, but even in those cases, so reluctant had the Legislature been to interfere with vested interests, that 20 years was allowed, during which the prohibited manufactories might be removed.

Mr. Justice WINDEYER agreed with Mr. Justice Hargrave that the rule should be discharged, as the by-law was not ultra vires. His Honor would not however say that the Council had power to prohibit burials in their municipality. With the question of expediency and convenience to individuals, the Court had nothing to do. The only question was as to the power the Municipal Council had to frame by-laws for the mode of the interment of their dead. By the 153rd section power was given to the Council to frame by-laws "for the regulating of the interment of the dead" within their municipality. It was conceded that they could make by-laws as to the time and mode of burying, but it was contended that the Council had no power as to the place. In the consideration of the public health the place of burial was most important. If the Council had the power to say that no more than two corpses were to be placed in any one grave, and the time of burial, &c., a fortiori they had the right to say that the grave should not be within 100 feet of any public street. It was contended that it was an interfering with private rights and rights of property. It was also an interference with the rights of property to prevent a person putting as many corpses as he liked in one grave. If he could do that without being restrained he could go further. Surely a man's rights could be so much interfered with as to prevent him from burying corpses in his front garden or back yard. After all, is not the question of interference merely one of degree? And the degree to be settled by the Council who are elected by the ratepayers—public convenience and advantage must prevail; the by-law was within the power of the Council, and was not ultra vires—it was, moreover, a very wholesome rule.

The COURT discharged the rule, but as the point was new and difficult, without costs.

EX PARTE FAIRFAX AND ANOTHER.

The argument of this matter (a prohibition) was commenced and adjourned, for the convenience of counsel engaged in the Jury Court, till Wednesday morning.

EX PARTE EMILY MARSH.

This was a motion for an attachment. When the matter was called on Mr. Knox appeared to show cause, and as no counsel appeared in support of the motion, it was adjourned till to-day (Wednesday).

EX PARTE M'DONALD IN RE M'DONALD V. M'CAULAY.

In this matter the Police Magistrate at Wagga Wagga had decided a case for wages "M'Donald v. M'Caulay" in favour of the plaintiff, in the absence of the defendant, who had not been duly served with the summons, and to whose notice the summons did not come till after the case had been decided. On those facts appearing Mr. Justice Windeyer (in vacation), on the application of M'Caulay, had granted a prohibition to stay all the proceedings.

Mr. C. B. Stephen now applied, on behalf of M'Donald, for a rule nisi to set that order of Mr. Justice Windeyer aside, on the ground that it had not been shown that the summons had not come to M'Caulay's notice in time, and that the summons had been sufficiently served.

The COURT unanimously refused the rule, and held that the order so made by Mr. Justice Windeyer had been right.

The jurors summoned for the Jury Court on Thursday, 4th March instant, will not be required to attend.

MATRIMONIAL AND DIVORCE CAUSES COURT.

(Before his Honor Mr. Justice WINDEYER.)

GRAHAM V GRAHAM.

On the motion of Mr. Smyth, instructed by Mr. Brennan, his HONOR made absolute the decree nisi for a dissolution of the marriage granted six months ago.

DODDEMEADE V. DODDEMEADE AND HOLT.

On the motion of Mr. C. B. Stephen, instructed by Messrs. Manning and Dowling, his HONOR made the decree nisi for a dissolution of the marriage, granted on the 18th June last, absolute.

SCHAFFRON V. SCHAFFRON.

On the motion of Mr. Rogers (for Mr. Bennett), instructed by Mr. Dunn, his HONOR made absolute the decree nisi for a dissolution of the marriage granted on the 18th June last.

ISLES V. ISLES AND ROBERTSON.

On the motion of Dr. Sly, instructed by Mr. Greer, his HONOR made an order dispensing with service of any further proceedings on the respondent or co-respondent in this suit, on it being stated on affidavit that they had left the colony after being served with the citation and petition. The issues are to be tried on the 16th of March on oral evidence, without a jury.

M'CAFFERTY V. M'CAFFERTY AND GIDSON.

On the motion of Dr. Sly, instructed by Mr. Greer, his HONOR made an order dispensing with service of any further proceedings on the respondent and co-respondent, who, it appeared, after being served with the petition and citation in Queensland, had left that colony, and their whereabouts could not be discovered. The issues to be tried on the 16th March on oral evidence, without a jury.

THOMASLANS V. THOMASLANS AND ROBERTSON.

On the motion of Dr. Sly, instructed by Mr. Greer, his HONOR settled the issues to be tried as follows:—(1) Marriage and (2) adultery. The issues to be tried on the 16th March on oral evidence, without a jury.

INSOLVENCY COURT.—TUESDAY.

(Before the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.)

CERTIFICATE APPLICATIONS.

The application of Rudolph Caspers was postponed to the 16th instant, for insolvent to have an opportunity to explain certain accommodation transactions.

The application of John Marshall was adjourned for three weeks, for insolvent to explain certain matters appearing in his papers.

The application of Thomas Ingersole was struck out, there being no appearance on behalf of insolvent.

The application of John Thurgood Thompson was adjourned for a month, for insolvent to allow inquiry to be made and for insolvent to explain how it was that he said in his schedule he had only wearing apparel, when his supplementary statement showed that he must have had £40 in his possession.

The application of James Morris was postponed for a week, for the examination of the papers in the case.

The application of Silas Winter was postponed, for insolvent within 10 days to explain how it was that, on receiving a sum of money, he made preferential payments to certain of his creditors.

The application of George Hosking was postponed until the 6th April, for insolvent to call a meeting of his creditors at Mudgee, to account for his insolvency, and for the proof of debts.

The application of Abraham Markson, to which objections were lodged late, was postponed to the 9th, to allow the objections to be considered by Mr. S. C. Brown, the insolvent's solicitor.

The application of Charles Francis Bryen was adjourned until the 23rd instant, to allow creditors to file objections within one week, and for insolvent to file an affidavit of explanation within a fortnight, an affidavit he had already given not being to the point.

Certificates were granted on the usual conditions of payment of all charges, on the application of Mr. Faithful, to George Houlton; on the application of Mr. Brennan, to Patrick Thomas Kerney and Henry Stuckey.

Sir George Innes appeared in support of an adjourned application on behalf of Joseph Tarrant. He read an affidavit of explanation, and addressed the Court on behalf of insolvent. His Honor said that the affidavit removed evidence of absolute fraud which previously appeared on the papers; but it seemed to him that the conduct of the insolvent in trading had been extremely reckless, especially in sending away goods to San Francisco with a very remote chance of getting anything for them, and not knowing anything of the consignees. His conduct required to be marked by a distinct suspension of the certificate for a long period. It would be really a preminm on such conduct if the Court did not notice and put a disability upon the person who so acted. He suspended the certificate for one year from the date of the first application, the 25th of November last.

To the application of Thomas Pegrem, Mr. Coonan appeared in support of objections, to the effect that insolvent did not keep any books of account; that shortly before his insolvency he sold his accounts and removed to another place; and it was alleged, in the opposing creditor's affidavit, that Pegrem contracted the debt with him when he was insolvent, and must have known it. This latter allegation, it was contended by Mr. King for the insolvent, was merely a deduction of the creditor, and not a legal objection. His Honor sustained this view, but stated that he would read over the evidence and give his decision on a future day.

The remaining applications on the list were postponed—James Hinton to the 11th instant, insolvent to file a supplementary schedule; Richard Wilkins and Samuel Solomon to the 9th instant; and A. B. Smith to Thursday next.

The application of Morris Moses, not being proceeded with, was struck out.

SURRENDERS.

Thomas Taylor, of Market-street, Sydney, bootmaker. Liabilities, £343 6s. 9d. Assets, £72. Mr. Sandeman, official assignee.

Alfred Revin, of Albion-street, Sydney, painter. Liabilities, £346 1s. Assets, £64 4s. Mr. Sempill, official assignee.

James Mitchell, of Grafton, late mail contractor, out of employment. Liabilities, £118 19s. 1d. Assets, £5 10s. Mr. Lyons, official assignee.

Malcolm Jennings, of Glen Innes, drover. Liabilities, £60. Assets, £18. Mr. Sempill, official assignee.

Charles Wright, of Clarence-street, Sydney, importer, on petition and affidavit. Schedule and statement to be filed on or before 12th March. Mr. Sandeman, official assignee.

METROPOLITAN QUARTER SESSIONS.

TUESDAY.

(Before His Honor Judge JOSEPHSON.)

The sittings of the Court of Quarter Sessions were resumed at the Courthouse, Darlinghurst, yesterday morning.

Mr. Rogers and Mr. Bennett prosecuted for the Crown.

WOUNDING WITH INTENT.

William Lear was placed upon his trial on a charge of feloniously cutting and wounding one William Nichols, with intent to do him some grievous bodily harm. The prisoner pleaded not guilty, and he was defended by Mr. W. Roberts.

The case for the prosecution was that, on the 20th February, the wife of the prosecutor was assaulted by the prisoner's wife, in Botany-street, Waterloo; and upon the prosecutor going to his wife's assistance, the prisoner struck Nichols on the head three or four times with a smoothing-iron, inflicting injuries which necessitated his removal to the Infirmary.

Mr. Roberts urged that the prisoner was not guilty, inasmuch as the affair arose out of a general row between the parties, and that the prosecutor had menaced the prisoner by threatening to fight him.

The jury found the prisoner guilty of a common assault, and he was remanded for sentence.

FORGERY AND UTTERING.

Ping Fong, a Chinaman, pleaded not guilty to a charge of forging and uttering a cheque for the amount of £5. Mr. Fitzgerald appeared on behalf of the prisoner. The case had been postponed from last Quarter Sessions.

From the evidence for the prosecution it appeared that on the 21st December last, the prisoner presented a cheque for the above amount to Angelo Arditto, who keeps an hotel at the corner of Pitt and Campbell streets, in satisfaction of an existing debt of £3. The prisoner explained that it was his own cheque, and that he had money in the bank. The cheque was drawn on the Commercial Banking Company, and was signed in the name of "Moy Mow," instead of in the prisoner's own name. Having no reason to doubt the prisoner's statement, Arditto accepted the cheque in payment of the debt, and handed the prisoner the balance, namely £2. On the cheque being presented at the bank, however, it was found to be valueless, and a warrant was issued for the arrest of the prisoner, who was apprehended by constable Weir on the 27th December. It was proved that the prisoner got another Chinaman to sign the cheque "Moy Mow," which which was a fictitious name.

His HONOR directed the jury at considerable length on the law of forgery, and cited cases to show that where a person induced another party to sign the name of a third person, a forgery was clearly established.

The jury, without leaving the box, found the prisoner guilty, and he was remanded for sentence.

FELONIOUSLY WOUNDING.

Catherine Burns was charged with feloniously wounding Mary Owen, with intent to do her grievous bodily harm. The prisoner, who pleaded not guilty, was defended by Mr. Smyth, instructed by Mr. Merriman.

The case for the prosecution was shortly this. The prosecutrix, who was staying at a house in Queen-street, next door to the prisoner's house, was in the back-yard on the 31st January last, when the prisoner threw part of a brick at the prosecutrix from an upstairs window. The brick struck the prosecutrix a heavy blow on the head, and rendered her partially insensible for the time being. She was under the doctor's care for some time afterwards, and had not yet quite recovered from the effects of the blow. A witness named Jane Bevan stated that she heard the prisoner say, after she threw the brick, that she was very sorry for what she had done, as she did not intend to hurt the prosecutrix.

The jury found the prisoner guilty, and she was remanded for sentence.

The Court then adjourned until 10 o'clock the following morning.

The following is the list of cases set down for trial to-day:—George Taylor and others, garotting; Harris Sloeman, assault on a child; Joseph Williams, indecent assault; James Dunnrig, indecent assault; James Johnson, inflicting grievous bodily harm; James Murray, shooting at with intent to murder.

In our report re Dent's case in yesterday's Herald, it was stated by mistake that Mr. Want, instructed by Mr. Roberts, appeared for the prisoner. Mr. Want was instructed by Messrs. Gannon and M'Laughlin.

CHURCH SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the Church Society for the diocese of Sydney was held in St. James's Schoolroom, Castlereagh-street, on Monday night. The Bishop of Sydney occupied the chair, and on the platform were Dr. Stanton, Bishop of North Queensland; and Canons O'Reilly, Stephen, and King. On the floor of the room were several clergymen besides a large attendance of subscribers, principally ladies.

Prayer having been engaged in, the secretary read the following report:—

"Notwithstanding the continuance of commercial depression and considerable financial pressure during the year, your committee are able with much thankfulness to report an increase in the funds received by the society, indicating some measure of progress in church work. This increase is chiefly to be noted in the special parochial payments, made on account of the stipends of clergymen and catechists. The General Fund of the society, which, as has been frequently explained, is the fund over which the committee alone exercises control, and from which all grants are made, while it shows a slight increase in all the ordinary sources from which it is derived, viz., subscriptions and donations, collections in churches, and contributions from auxiliary associations for general purposes, not being this year augmented by what may be called extraordinary sources, by income, legacies, &c., does not present any marked increase. The amount of £49 10s. has, however, been received as interest on the legacies already funded. The year's expenditure has again exceeded the income, and the debit balance with which the year commenced has now reached the large sum of £923 10s. 3d. Although some grants have been made during the year in aid of the erection of churches and parsonages, in the payment of passage money, and travelling expenses of clergymen, yet by far the largest proportion of the society's income has been devoted to supplementing the salaries of clergymen and catechists. This is a branch of the society's operations which has steadily increased year by year, and is, as your committee venture to think, of the greatest importance in the present and future interests of the Church. To subsidise extensive or populous parishes, and to assist in providing the ministrations of religion for scattered hamlets or the crowded city or suburban parish, is assuredly the duty of our Church, but other agencies would be comparatively useless if the living voice of the ministers of religion be withheld. Under this conviction your committee have given their earnest efforts to distribute the funds of the society in such a way as best to meet this urgently pressing demand. Your committee have made grants in aid of the stipends of 38 clergymen and 8 catechists, but in order to meet the claims of now localities, your committee were reluctantly compelled to reduce the amount of some of the older grants. It will be obvious that while grants for buildings purposes, grants in aid of the erection of churches and parsonages, and other objects contemplated by the society, may vary in amount from year to year, and as time goes on may be reasonably expected to decrease, no diminution can be expected, or should be looked for, in this branch of your society's operations for many years to come. It has steadily increased every year during the many years of the society's existence, and is now absorbing so large a proportion of its income as to leave but little to be expended on the other objects contemplated by the society. Such being the case, it is with much pleasure that your committee would draw attention to the effort now being made by his lordship the Bishop to raise a loan fund to be employed in assisting to build churches and parsonages, as well as in enabling parishes already provided with church buildings to liquidate oppressive parochial debts. The formation of this fund will tend to lessen in various ways the pressure of claims upon your society's income, and better enable it to meet the increasing claims of that branch of its operations which so imperatively demands attention—its work as a Pastoral Aid Society. In reviewing the grants for building purposes made during the year, your committee venture to think that the money will be found to have been judiciously expended. No grants have been made without careful deliberation and examination, and in many instances your committee have been privileged to see results from these small grants far beyond their expectations. In making a grant of £300 to Northern Queensland, your committee considered that the members of the society would cordially approve of the effort to sustain our brethren labouring in that remote and truly missionary diocese. His lordship the Bishop of Northern Queensland has most kindly recognized this attempt of your committee—following up past efforts in the same direction to render opportune assistance to his infant diocese. The usual grant of £50 was

Messrs. Gilchrist, Watt, and Co. have received a telegram announcing the safe arrival of the P.M.S. Australia at Auckland at 7 o'clock yesterday morning, and stating that she would sail again at 2 p.m.

The Glenelg (s.) left Adelaide at 5.10 p.m. on the 24th February, rounded Cape Jervis at 1.15 a.m. on 25th, and the south-west Cape of Tasmania at 6 a.m. on the 28th, and made fast to the wharf at Hobart Town at 6 p.m. same day; left again at 6 p.m. passed Gabo Island at 4 p.m. on the 1st instant, Cape Jervis at 8.45 a.m. on the 2nd, and arrived at Sydney at 6 p.m. same day. She experienced a strong S.E. gale, with heavy sea, on the 28th, which moderated on the morning of the 1st, and was followed with thick foggy weather. At 11 a.m. on the 1st, Mr. Pettit, the chief steward, suddenly dropped down dead, it is supposed from disease of the heart. His remains were removed to the deadhouse immediately on the arrival of the Glenelg at Circular Quay.

The Kiama (s.) left Moruya on the 1st at 11.30 a.m., called at Bateman Bay at 1.45 p.m., left at 3 p.m., arrived at Ulladulla at 7.30, left at 7.30, passed Cape St. George on the 2nd at 10.30 a.m., entered Port Jackson at 1.30, arrived alongside the Phœnix Wharf at 2.30. Experienced light adverse winds and fine weather to Ulladulla, after light winds and S.E. weather, overcast, smooth sea to arrival. Cargo: 450 bags maize, 100 bags bark, 200 kegs butter, 450 cheeses, 108 sides bacon, 1 case, 68 bags potatoes, 4 bales leather, 1 piano, 5 casks tallow, 800 spokes, 29 shafts, 2 wheels, 10 bales sheepskins, 6 packages personal effects, 25 empty casks, 7 cases fruit, 1 case honey, 16 cases eggs, 1 bag seed, 1 copper, 3 calves, 22 pigs, 5 crates fowls, and sundries.

The immigrant ship Norval, from London on the 9th December, and Plymouth 4 days later, arrived in port early yesterday morning flying the yellow flag. The ship is under the command of Captain Halliday, and Dr. Thomas Harrison is the medical officer on board. The captain reports that he has 300 adults, 66 children immigrants, and that he has two or three cases of chicken-pox amongst them. The ship has been 91 days doing the journey, and, with the exception of the illness above referred to, the health of those on board is first class. The Norval crossed the Equator on the 4th January, the meridian of the Cape of Good Hope on the 31st, and was off Tasmania on the 23rd February. Moderate weather was met throughout the journey until Sunday last, when a heavy gale blew from the southward. The Norval has been placed in quarantine for a few days.

The Eastcroft, ship, from London, which arrived in Port Jackson yesterday morning, left London on the 25th November, but owing to her colliding with an Italian barque, which carried away all her mizen rigging and did other damage, she was obliged to put back to Gravesend, and did not leave again until the 6th December. Coming down the Channel she had contrary winds, and passed the Lizard on the 12th. She then had a fair wind, but experienced no north-east trades whatever, and crossed the Equator on the 3rd of January, in longitude 29° W., 22 days from the Lizard. The south-east trades were taken in 1° S., and were kept until the 16th January in 21° S. The meridian of Greenwich was crossed on the 21st January, and that of the Cape on the 25th in latitude 44° S. The easting was run in the parallel of 45° S. Experienced moderate weather throughout, and came up from Tasmania on the 23rd. Had a succession of light N.E. winds for the next five days, and on Sunday encountered the tail end of the late southerly "buster," which split the mainsail. In latitude 46·11 N., longitude 14·18 W., on the 13th December, the Easteroft took off the crew of the Dutch barque Twee Susters, belonging to Amsterdam, bound from Batavia to Cork with a cargo of sugar. She was leaking very badly, and was making upwards of two feet of water per hour. The men were transferred on the 14th December to the English schooner Annie, bound from the Brazils to Falmouth. The Easteroft is anchored below Garden Island, having 70 tons of gunpowder on board, and is in very fine order.

The barque Lieutenant Maury, from Mauritius, arrived off Sydney Heads at seven o'clock on Monday evening, but did not enter the harbour until an early hour yesterday morning. She left Port Louis on the 6th January, had moderate wind and weather until Sunday last, when she encountered the heavy gale which blew from the southward. She laboured very heavily throughout the gale, and the seas were tremendous; in fact, they frequently broke over her mainyard. She accomplished the passage in 57 days, and brings a cargo of about 500 tons sugar.

The Madura, barque, from Port Phillip, arrived off Garden Island last evening. She left Melbourne on the 19th February, and for the first three days experienced light easterly winds off Wilson's Promontory. She was becalmed for two days, and on the 26th came in for the full force of the late gale, during which the ship laboured very heavily and shipped tremendous seas. The wind abated on Monday morning, and fine southerly breeze ensued. She brings a cargo of wheat and flour.

The Fleur-de-Lis, barque, arrived at Port Jackson yesterday afternoon, and was towed up to Neutral Bay. She left Liverpool on the 2nd of December, and passed the South Reach light at midnight on the 3rd, and came down the Irish Channel with a strong fair wind, which on the 5th increased to a heavy gale, which lasted for three days. The north-east trades were taken on the 22nd December in latitude 21° N., and were lost in 9° N. The south-east trades were very good and were taken in 7·45 W., and the Equator was crossed early on the 1st January, in longitude 27·45 W. The meridian of the Cape of Good Hope was passed on January 26, in 42° S., and the easting was run down in 40° S. with strong westerly winds. The south-west Cape of Tasmania was rounded on the 22nd January, and light N.E. winds ensued until the 26th, when a very strong southerly gale sprung up and the ship was obliged to heave-to. During the gale, whilst the ship was shortening sail, a boy named Kenneth M'Donald, fell from the topgallant yard and was killed instantaneously. The ship brings a full cargo.

A barque, bound north, passed Sydney Heads at 8 o'clock yesterday morning.

The Wallaroo, barque, from Wallaroo, arrived in Sydney yesterday evening, and went into quarantine.

The Damascus and the Sydenham were both towed to the Orient wharf yesterday morning.

The Dunrune, ship, will go to Smith's wharf this morning to discharge her cargo.

The Strathnaira, barque, from London to Adelaide, lost the whole crew in the late collision with the Edith Hough.

Steam shares firm: Australasian had sales at 16, buyers at 15¾, sellers at 16¼; Clarence and Richmond preferential, wanted at 12½, none for sale, old issue not salable, 6 asked; for Hunter River there was no offer, 8 wanted; 5¾ obtainable for Illawarra, and no sellers; North Shore Ferry had buyers at 13s., sellers at 18s. The only sale of Insurance was Pacific at 53s., and 53s. 6d. asked; Accident had buyers at 6d., sellers at 9d.; City wanted at 1s. 8d., held for 1s. 6d; Australian Fire continue scarce, 6s. 3d. would be paid for a parcel; Mercantile offered at 1s. 8d.: no quotations given for General; New South Wales had buyers at 50s., sellers at 53s.; there was some inquiry for Sydney Fire at 60s., holders wanted 63s.: Sydney Marine not offered, buyers at 80s.; United offered at 87s. 6d.: in Gaslight 13 was paid for old, 13½ asked—new issue weaker. 5 would have been accepted. No Sydney Exchange or Pyrmont Bridge in the market. Shale and Oil wanted at 11s., offered at 12s. Volunteer land orders had buyers at 90, sellers at 91. Coal shares in more request, Bulli wanted at 12, held for 14; Wallsend had buyers at 14½, sellers at 15; Waratah offered at 9½, and Vale of Clywdd at 12s. 6d. The only business done in Gold shares was 94s. paid for Band and Albion, closing with buyers at 90s., sellers at 97s.; Krohmann's had buyers at 4s. 6d., sellers at 5s.; for Star of Peace 2s. 3d. offered, 3s. asked; Rapp's held for 1s.; New North Clunes had buyers at 9½, sellers at 11. Debentures were more plentiful. Queensland fours offered at 93, New the matter has been so long delayed has apparently been the unwillingness of successive Governments to incur the responsibility of accepting Mr. MORIARTY's advice, and acting upon it, or of overriding it and giving effect to their own ideas, or those of other people. The main dispute has been about the material to be employed. Mr. MORIARTY is a stanch believer in iron; other people have cried out loudly for wood; some have preferred stone; and under the circumstances it was impossible to satisfy everybody. The Government has at last decided to have Mr. MORIARTY's design carried out, but in wood instead of iron. Although in the course of the long controversy, there have been advocates of wood who have laughed at the teredo, in spite of the evidence given by timber riddled and honeycombed, the principal objection to the use of this material has generally been admitted to be its greater destructibility than iron. This would be an important consideration if the cost of both would be the same, and it were also essential that the structure, once built, should last for generations unaltered. But, according to the estimate, wood would be the cheaper material even with iron at the low prices to which it recently fell in the English market; and, of course, the difference would be greatly increased now that the price of iron generally has risen, and that of some descriptions has advanced by more than 50 per cent. Beyond certain limits, however, the question of permanence is not one of first magnitude in this case. If nothing more were proposed than the construction of one unbroken line of seawall, it would be. But the intention being to provide more accommodation than such a wharf would afford, by constructing overlapping berths, each projecting at an angle from the shore-line, it is necessary to keep in view the probable requirements of the vessels that are likely to visit the port. When this question was first raised, the trade of Sydney was carried chiefly in sailing vessels of comparatively small size and tonnage. Since then it has become necessary to modify the plans, to provide for the wants of the more modern long-drawn clippers. Now the trade seems to be passing into another stage; and steamers of a size we should once hardly have dreamt of now come at regular and frequent intevals. Who shall say what further changes may yet take place? In view of such possibilities, it would be questionable policy to expend more money than would otherwise be necessary for the purpose of building a wharf that might outlive its full measure of usefulness, and have to be pulled to pieces and remodelled before it was half worn out. The discussion that took place some time ago upon the question of wharfage charges brought into prominent view the fact that the Government in establishing a public wharf at the Circular Quay came into competition with private wharfingers. Large sums of money have been expended by private capitalists in providing accommodation for shipping; and the Government cannot embark in the same kind of business without entering into conflict with private interests. But, however true that may be, it does not follow that, because there are private wharfs in other parts of the harbour, this unrivalled site for a first-class wharf should be left unoccupied and unused because it is in the hands of the Government. If it were sold and passed into private hands, there would still be competition with the present owners of other wharfs, unless they could lay their hands upon it and establish a monopoly. The wisdom of surrendering so valuable a piece of water frontage into private hands may well be doubted. But if it is retained by the Government, it would be simply discreditable for the Government to let it remain in little better than a state of nature. The only policy worthy of the Government is that of improving to the utmost the capabilities of the site, and setting an example which private enterprise might follow. Whatever arrangement may be made in order to procure from shipowners returns bearing some fair proportion to the facilities afforded, the first thing in establishing a Government wharf is to provide abundant facilities in order that trade may be promoted. Possibly it might be the best course to let the new wharf, in order that it might be managed on purely commercial principles. Perhaps it might be well to lease portions of it to those large shipowning firms in England which command trade enough to make it worth their while to hold permanently a wharf in Sydney. But, in whatever way these questions may be settled hereafter, the first thing to be done is to provide the wharf with sheds, locked warehouses, and full facilities for the reception, loading, and discharge of cargo. Then we may congratulate ourselves not only upon the trade of the port, but upon showing a right appreciation of its importance. We do not care to inquire into the reasons which cause those fine steamers of the Orient line to lie off the land, and load and unload by means of lighters. On the whole, presumably this system serves the purposes of the owners better than any other which could be adopted under present conditions. But it can hardly be denied that the system is primitive if not barbarous, and that its adoption, as the best for the owners, reflects discredit upon the arrangements, accommodation, and appliances of the port. What if all the commerce of Port Jackson had to be subjected to the delays, the inconveniences, the risks, and the cost of lighterage! There would be little cause for boasting then, at any rate. But if such a system would be bad for the trade as a whole, it must be bad for that important part of it which finds employment for these steamers. If we offered them not only good wharfage accommodation, but abundant facilities for unloading and loading with safety and dispatch, it could hardly fail to serve them, as well as promote our trade, to have the work done under the most favourable conditions.

The period of sixty-four years which Sir HENRY PARKES had to review on Monday as the lifetime of the Macquarie light, which is to be replaced at the entrance to Port Jackson by the newest appliances of scientific invention, comprises the most progressive epoch in the history of modern nations. Up to the commencement of the present century the printing-press and the mariner's compass were the two principal achievements of industrial invention. Now both of these have been developed and applied to an extent of which our grandfathers never dreamt; and we have added to them besides, the steam-engine, the railway locomotive, the electric telegraph, the submarine cable, iron steamships, and hundreds of machines for abridging labour, increasing and applying motive power, and facilitating production in factory, field, forest, and mine. Aided by these inventions, England can feed and clothe twice the population she had half a century ago, thanks to her free ports and to her magnificent mercantile fleet which carries her manufactures to every land, and takes back their produce of food and raw materials for her otherwise surplus millions. It is the good fortune of New South Wales to begin her history at the dawn of this modern progressive era, when she has the benefit of the experience and inventions of the world to aid her early growth, and contribute to her rapid development. That England should have been eight centuries from the Conquest to the beginning of the nineteenth century in attaining a population of eight or nine millions, and should then increase it to twenty-five millions in three-quarters of a century, seems scarcely credible. Yet such are the facts; and she has, besides, contributed millions of her children towards American, Australian, and African settlement. What else can her daughters do than freely receive the surplus labour and capital she has to give, and imitate her example in that free commercial intercourse which has at once enriched her and benefited all her customers. New South Wales is emulous of such a career, and the new electric light which will shine out over the Pacific from the rocky gates of Port Jackson will bid the mariner welcome whatever flag he carries, and from whatever land he comes. It is fitting that the best light, as well as the oldest, in Australasia, should guide the commerce of all nations into a port which (Singapore excepted) is the freest out of England, and where there is not only safe anchorage in a vast and beautiful harbour, but also liberty to trade untrammelled by fiscal restrictions, and with no other protection but that of just and equal laws.

The results which were anticipated from the accession to office of the DE FREYCINET Ministry in France seem likely to be in a great measure realized. Germany appears to be disquieted, and, though a semi-official denial has been given to the report that the Government view the French Ministry with disfavour, there is good reason to believe that the course of events in France is being watched with feelings very nearly akin to dissatisfaction and distrust on the other side of the Rhine. M. DE FREYCINET and his colleagues apparently intend to carry out to the full that bad principle which is the cause of so much trouble and ill-feeling in America, and which it was lately sought to acclimatize in Australia, namely, that sweeping changes in the Public Service naturally follow a change of Government. It is, of course, necessary to secure loyalty in the Public Service, but the advanced Republicans have carried this to an extreme by the irreconcilable attitude which they have adopted towards those whom they choose to suspect of disloyalty to the Republic—an elastic term, which often implies only that the suspected is guilty of a little moderation and discretion. The recent action of the Paris Municipality in eulogising the faction of ROBESPIERRE and deploring the Thermidorian "re-action," has caused no small alarm to the peace-loving and timid among the population of Paris. It is scarcely gratifying to reflect that the municipality are looking back with regret to the golden days of HEBERT and MARAT, or to contemplate the possibility, now that the Chambers are sitting in Paris, that they may attempt to return to that happy state when the sacredness of true freedom was vindicated by the mob occupying the Hall of the Convention, turning the deputies out of their seats, and dancing the carmagnole on the floor. Now that matters are apparently tending in the same direction as in 1850-1851, the eyes of the world are naturally turned towards the successors of the man who then used the misfortunes of the Republic as a stepping-stone to power; but the Republic has just now little danger to apprehend from that quarter. Startling and sensational in its rise, and in every incident throughout its career, in which the extremes of greatness and littleness have been strangely mingled, the family of BONAPARTE has experienced another strange freak of fortune in the blow which seems likely to produce its final fall. The death of the Prince Imperial is to the Republic—though we are loth to use an expression which may seem unfeeling—from a Republican point of view, a great advantage gained. The most dangerous of all rivals has been removed just at the time when the Republic is giving many cause to be dissatisfied, and to compare its merits with those of other possible forms of government.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

MR. WILLIAM FORSTER has been lecturing before the Society of Arts in London on colonization. He attacked the immigration policy of these colonies, and found fault with "the political success achieved by men of the worst commercial and political character." His remarks, we are told by our special cable message, provoked some warm rejoinders from Sir Charles Nicholson, Mr. Torrens, and Mr. Julian E. Salamons, and the discussion was eventually stopped on the ground that the lecture was intended for political purposes. According to the Lahore Gazette, published on Saturday, the British Government had determined to retain possession of Jellalabad, establish a protectorate over Southern and Eastern Afghanistan, and hand over Herat to Persia. It will be seen by one of our cable messages this morning that the Gazette had no foundation for the statements it made regarding the future of Afghanistan. In the House of Commons, on Monday, the Secretary of State for the War Department introduced the Army Estimates for the current year, and they were passed unopposed. Another cablegram announces the suspension of payment by the Hull District Banking Company. Regarding the wool sales, our cable message states that on Monday previous prices were firmly maintained. The present series close on the 12th instant, and the new series are announced to open on April 20.

ONE of our cable messages of Monday conveyed the startling threat which the revolutionary party in Russia was reported to have made a few days ago, that they would burn down St. Petersburgh on the anniversary of the accession to the throne of the Emperor Alexander. If this threat was carried into effect, or if any serious attempt was made to carry it into effect, there must have been lively scenes in St. Petersburgh yesterday. We have not received any further information regarding this proposed revolutionary proceeding, although we have cable messages from London up to yesterday. The Nihilists may have thought better of it, or their plots may have been discovered, or the whole thing may turn out to be nothing better than a gigantic hoax. A thrill of horror was sent through every civilized country some weeks ago, when it was reported that an attempt had been made to blow up a train in which the Czar was travelling. Fortunately a baggage train preceded, instead of followed, the Imperial train, and those charged with the duty of exploding the mine, did not notice that it was but a baggage train that was coming along, and so their plot only succeeded in destroying two or three waggons. More recently an explosion took place in the Winter Palace, and fortunately the Czar was not in the room in which the Nihilists supposed he would be when they fired the mine, and his life was again spared. Regarding the Moscow railway incident, the Examiner, a well-informed London weekly of January 8, observes:—"Our readers will recollect that we have been rather sceptical about the genuineness of the late attempt on the Emperor of Russia. Our scepticism is singularly confirmed by a telegram from Moscow in Wednesday's Daily News, by which the public was informed that the police officer in charge of the district where the alleged attack occurred had been 'severely reprimanded,' and would be at once 'dismissed if such a thing occurred again.' To those who know anything of Russia, and of the expeditious methods usually adopted in that country to suppress officials who have been guilty of even the smallest neglect of what is considered duty, particularly when that duty concerns the safety of their Sovereign, this telegram must appear simply ludicrous. We can hardly be wrong in supposing that the police inspector in question will be quietly rewarded in some tangible form, while the probability that such an attempt should occur again in his district (unless, indeed by superior orders) is certainly rather remote, and the poor man need scarcely be afraid of this awful threat."

THE ordinary monthly general meeting of the Board of Directors of the Sydney Infirmary was held in that institution yesterday afternoon—Dr. Renwick, president, occupied the chair; and among those present were:—Canon Stephen (vice-president), Drs. Miller and M'Kay, and Messrs. Alger, Josephson, Senior, Starkey, Graham, Cane, Wise, C. J. Roberts, Guy, Chapman, M'Coy, and Dean Sheridan. The minutes of previous general, special, annual, and committee meetings were read and confirmed. Mr. Cane desired to know if it was decided that reporters were not to be allowed to take note of, and make public, the proceedings in the Infirmary wards, and was told in reply that they were not permitted to enter the porter's lodge and make use of the books of the institution therein contained, but that every information would be afforded them at the office during the day. Dr. Renwick stated that while it was desirable to give every publicity to the proceedings in the Infirmary, it was injudicious to allow reporters access to the books, especially as all the information needed could be obtained at the office from the secretary. Canon Stephen having heard of the discourteous treatment certain poor people had received at the hands of the dispensary servants, gave notice of his intention to move at the next meeting, that full inquiry should be made into the matter. He also pointed out the necessity for remodelling the dispensary branches, that in the neighbourhood being sadly in want of improvement. Mr. Graham desired to know why the Infirmary nurses wore badges in the street, and was informed that the wearing of such badge was rendered imperative by one of the rules, but that the nurses were not compelled to wear them in the streets. Accounts to amount of £1023 17s. 5d. were passed for payment. The chairman read a letter from the medical staff, approving of the new plans and recommending their adoption. The plans had been forwarded to the Government Printer to be lithographed. A letter was also read, which it was intended to send to the Bank of New South Wales, introducing Mr. John Alger as the treasurer of the institution, and the meeting then terminated.

THE ship Norval, with 300 adults and 66 children, immigrants, arrived yesterday. The captain reports two or three cases of chicken-pox on board, and the ship has consequently been placed in quarantine for a few days.

THE University authorities have discovered that a theft of some of the examination papers used at the Civil Service examination on Monday, was lately perpetrated by a boy at the office of Messrs. Gibbs, Shallard, and Co., the printers, and that these got into the hands of two or three of the candidates, who were thereby enabled to pass satisfactorily. It appears that before the candidates separated suspicions were aroused by one of them stating, in the hearing of some one connected with the University, that he knew all the questions before hand. The fact was at once communicated to the examiners, and as the candidates, some 60 in numbers, had not left, every one of them was questioned as to whether he knew anything of the papers before hand. Some information was elicited, and with commendable promptitude the examiners of the University immediately pushed their inquiries further. As the result of their investigations it has been ascertained that a youth in the Civil service, who had passed on a previous occasion said to one or two of the candidates to be examined that he knew where he could get them the papers containing the questions which they would have to answer. They, not being unwilling, accepted the assistance offered, and either he or they obtained one or two copies, it is said, for a small sum of money from a boy who had been engaged assisting in the work of printing them. As showing the unfair disposition that exists on the part of some candidates, we are informed that Mr. Gibbs, a member of the firm who printed the papers, and the overseer, have previously been offered bribes for these papers, and knowing the value of secrecy in the work of printing them, they were on their guard. Notwithstanding this, one of the boys managed to secure one or two copies and dispose of them to the intending candidates. So far, we understand, the University examiners have discovered that three of these were aware of the questions, and they are still making inquiries with a view to ascertain whether any others profited by the theft. Of course the examination of Monday will now go for nothing, and another will be held forthwith. This will be inconvenient for those who have passed honestly, but it cannot well be dispensed with. As to the others who have made use of information obtained surreptitiously no sympathy will be felt for them, and if they are refused examination, at all events for a term, they will only receive their deserts. It is not improbable that as the result of this unfortunate occurrence an arrangement will be made by which the examinations will be conducted from written papers. There is some reason to fear that on one previous occasion an examination paper was obtained in an improper manner by one of the candidates for the Civil Service examination.

A MEETING of the committee of the Irish Distress Relief Fund was held yesterday morning, at the Town Hall. Present: Mr. P. A. Jennings, C.M.G., in the chair; his Worship the Mayor, Mr. Thomas Buckland, Mr. Alderman Chapman, J.P., Mr. John T. Toohey, Mr. Alderman Hordern, Mr. J. G. O'Ryan, Mr. D. M'Beath, J.P., Mr. James M. Toohey, Mr. H. Besumont, J.P., Mr. J. P. Garvan, Mr. R. Prendergast, Mr. P. Higgins, J.P., and Mr. Daniel O'Connor, M.L.A. Several sums were received, including £66 from Narrabri; £100 from Taralga, per Bank of New South Wales; from Merriwa, per E. B. Backhouse, third instalment, £3 10s.; besides several smaller sums, in all amounting to £300.

A SPECIAL general meeting of members was held last night at the School of Arts, to decide whether or not the reading-room should be opened on Sunday afternoons, and the decision arrived at by a narrow majority was, that it should be so opened. About 300 members attended, and the meeting lasted from 8 o'clock until half-past 10, the speakers being very numerous, and party feeling running very high. The president of the institute, his Honor Judge Windeyer, presided, but at times even he failed to keep order. A full report of the proceedings will be found in another column.

THE usual monthly meeting of the Presbytery of Sydney was held, yesterday, in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Present—Rev. Dr. Fullerton (Moderator), Drs. Steel and White, Messrs. Gardiner, Mackenzie, Paterson, Jarvie, Auld, Cosh, and M'Kinnon, ministers; with Messrs. Sidey and Aitken, elders. An Elders Commission from Campbell-street Church, Balmain, was read and sustained. The Rev. Dr. Steel applied for nine months leave of absence for the purpose of visiting Europe. On the motion of the Rev. R. Paterson, seconded by the Rev. R. M'Kinnon, the request was unanimously granted. The Rev. A. M. Jarvie was appointed Moderator of St. Stephen's sessions during the absence of the minister, and the Moderator and Clerk of Presbytery were instructed to furnish Dr. Steel with a suitable certificate of his standing in the Church. It was then moved by the Rev. Dr. Steel, and seconded by the Rev. Dr. Moore White, and carried unanimously,—"That the Presbytery, recognising the illustrious character and abilities of Dr. Chalmers, and his eminent services to philosophy, theology, and practical benevolence, and especially to Presbyterianism and to his native land, resolve to celebrate the centenary of his birth on the 17th March instant, by holding a public meeting in Sydney, and appoint a committee to make all arrangements and to invite Presbyterians and Scotchmen generally to take part in the celebration." A committee was appointed consisting of the Moderator, Drs. Steel, White, Messrs. Auld, Paterson, and Jarvie. The Rev. John Boyd, of Melbourne, being present, was introduced to the Presbytery by the Rev. R. Paterson. Rev. Dr. Moore White, Convener of the Committee on Church Extension in the Suburbs, gave in a progress report, stating that the committee had been faithfully endeavouring to carry out the instructions of the Presbytery to proceed with all diligence in the work of church extension so auspiciously commenced at Woollahra, Darling Point, and Double Bay, and at Petersham by the committee, and detailed reports of an encouraging nature as to the state of each district were given. The seal of the Petersham people, who have already taken steps towards the erection of a building on the site secured, was specially commended. The report was adopted by the Presbytery. A gentleman having applied to be received as a catechist, a committee, consisting of Dr. White, Messrs. Auld, Paterson, and Gardiner, ministers, with Messrs. Sidey and Aitken, elders, was appointed to confer with him and report to next meeting of Presbytery.

THE Full Court in Banco, consisting of their Honors Mr. Justice Hargrave, Mr. Justice Faucett, and Mr. Justice Windeyer, sat yesterday morning, at 11 o'clock, after Mr. Justice Windeyer had disposed of the business in the public chamber and a number of motions in the Divorce Court. The argument of the motions for rules nisi for new trials in Crawford v. Doherty and Carter v. Cox was postponed, and also the two real property motions in re Goodman and in re Hackett. In deciding the prohibition matter ex parte Flack, the Full Court held that the by-law of the Municipality of Leichhardt, prohibiting the interment of bodies within 100 feet of any public road within the municipality, was not ultra vires. The hearing of the slander case of Shepherd v. Dibbs was further resumed before his Honor Sir William Manning yesterday. Several witnesses, including Mrs. J. C. Dibbs, were examined on behalf of the plaintiff. The further hearing of the case was adjourned until Thursday morning next.

IT may be in the recollection of our readers that an action was tried in the Supreme Court, Hungerford v. Davenport, in reference to a transaction which occurred in December of 1877, in which the complainant obtained a verdict with damages. Out of this case arose, about three months ago, a prosecution for perjury, Davenport v. Edmund Hungerford, which, after a protracted investigation at the Central Police Court, was dismissed. Application was immediately afterwards made for a fresh summons against Edmund Hungerford, intending thereby to procure a rehearing of the charge, with which application Mr. Crane declined to comply. An application at the Water Police Court, however, was more successful, and in due course the charge came on for hearing before Messrs. Lester and Goodridge, and was, on Monday, dismissed without the Bench calling upon Mr. Hungerford for a defence. At the Central Police Court, yesterday, a similar proceeding, Jolly v. Cecil P. Hungerford, which was instituted at the same time, but was adjourned from week to week, pending the result of the first prosecution, was struck out for want of prosecution.

THE sittings of the Court of Quarter Sessions were resumed at the Courthouse, Darlinghurst, yesterday morning, before his Honor Judge Josephson. Mr. Rogers and Mr. Bennett prosecuted for the Crown. The first case was that of a man named William Lear, who was arraigned on a charge of wounding one William Nichols with intent to do grievous bodily harm. The accused was found guilty of a common assault, and was remanded for sentence. A Chinaman named Ping Fong was convicted of forging and uttering a valueless cheque for £5, and was remanded for sentence. Catherine Burns was found guilty of unlawfully wounding one Mary Owen, and was also remanded for sentence. The Court at its rising adjourned till 10 o'clock this morning.

WE have received from the secretary of the Society for the Relief of Destitute Children, Randwick, a copy of the annual report for 1879. It is printed in pamphlet form, and, in addition to the report read at the annual meeting in January last, it contains a large amount of statistical and general information. The compilations date as far back as 1852, the year of the establishment of the society, and it may be interesting to know that the summary of children who have benefited by the operations of the society is as follows:—Apprenticed under indenture, 720 boys, 578 girls; restored to parents, 1858; died in 28 years, 199; remaining in asylum on December 31, 1879, 373 boys, 268 girls—total 3492.

MR. JOHN A. M'KILLOP, manager of the Commercial Bank, Carcoar, yesterday received letters patent for a new kind of bank cheque. The peculiarity of the cheque is in its form—the pounds, shillings, and pence being entered in separate lines, and the writing and figures showing value being brought more readily into view at one glance than is the case in an ordinary cheque. There is also a line containing the word and figures, "under £—0.0," so that the drawer, by the insertion of a figure, and the crossing of a naught or naughts, can indicate in round numbers the nearest value of the cheque. This mode takes not more time than the filling-up of ordinary cheques, and certainly affords an additional element of safety against fraudulent alteration.

THERE is now on view, in the window of Mr. Paling's music warehouse, George-street, a landscape in oils, painted by Mr. E. W. Minchen, a colonial artist. It represents the valley near Govett's Leap, and is a capital instance of native talent, for though it has defects these are more than compensated for by its merits. The artist has caught perhaps the best point of vision he could have obtained in the neighbourhood, for, though the famous waterfall is invisible, the centre of the picture is occupied by that savage gorge which seems to have been formed by the rending in twain of mountains, and which stretches in sinuous majesty past projecting headlands and rounded peaks until it is lost in the mists of distance. The immediate foreground is occupied by the escarpment of grey old rock from which the artist sketched, and here to the left the slender shaft and thinly tremulous foliage of a gum-tree give diversity to the picture. The middle distance shows the frowning precipices of the opposite wall of the valley, the verdant undulations which crown them, and the evergreen forest at their base. And so the eye is led on past picturesque combinations of rock and foliage, and blue mist wreaths hanging lightly over the tree tops, until sky and land blend in the cloudy haze of the background. Mr. Minchen has a good eye for effect, arranges his picture well, understands the rules of perspective thoroughly, and paints with great delicacy of finish; but his colouring is at times crude, and his study of atmospheric effects has not been all that it should have been. For example, it is right enough that the trees in the gorge should possess the hue of well-watered vegetation, since the mountain streams ever loving their roots nourishes their foliage. But the gum tree, on almost bare rock, exposed to the full glare of the sun, should surely be rather of an olive-brown tinge than the bright fresh colour Mr. Minchen has given it. And the rainbow are reflected on the clouds in the middle distance, rises at too obtuse an angle to the horizon, while the upper clouds are quite woolly in appearance. These are faults which the artist can correct, and which are only slight defects in an otherwise fine picture.

A CROSSING eight feet wide, formed of granite set in tar, has been made in Pitt-street, opposite the two shops of Mr. J. L. Hordern. The work has been done at the joint expense of the Corporation and Mr. Hordern, and it will afford a clean crossing-place for Mr. Hordern's customers as well as for the public in wet weather.

NEXT Saturday week the Highland Society of New South Wales will carry out a series of athletic sports in connection with the International Exhibition, under the patronage of his Excellency the Governor. The management has been put into good hands, and it is very reasonable to expect that the sports will prove as great a success as those which have taken place under the same management in the past. A good programme has already been published, and from the advertisements which have appeared it will be seen that an improvement in the ordinary money prizes is to be made, the first and second prizes in each event consisting of a gold and silver medal. It is to be hoped that the meeting will be worthy of the cause it is intended to commemorate.

ON Friday evening last, February 27, a lecture was given at St. Peter's Church, Mount Victoria, by Mr. Joseph Campbell, on "The Lake District of New Zealand," and a collection made in aid of the Parsonage Fund. The lecture, which was well attended, proved highly interesting, and a hearty vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Campbell. At the conclusion of the lecture, the chairman, Mr. John Perry, announced that he had the pleasant task to perform of presenting Mr. Campbell (who has for the last three months done the duty at the church, and is about leaving) with a purse of sovereigns from the parishioners, as a small token of their esteem and appreciation of his earnest labours for their welfare. Mr. Campbell thanked the parishioners for their kind appreciation of his services, saying that "he had only done his duty, and that he had been very much helped and encouraged by the hearty and kind manner in which the parishioners had received his visitations. The erection of a parsonage was a matter of great importance to the parish, for until that was done they could not have a clergyman to reside amongst them." A building committee was formed, consisting of Messrs. Perry, Prott, Farnsworth, Biles, Dunn, and Pass; the clergyman for the time being to be chairman. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the proceedings.

A MAN named Tiffens was admitted into the Infirmary suffering from three stabs, supposed to have been self-inflicted. The wounds were inflicted by an ordinary penknife, and are not severe. The patient is now progressing favourably under Dr. Hastie's care. A boy was also admitted suffering from a simple fracture of the right leg, caused by a revolving leathern band used in some machinery becoming entangled about it. Dr. Hastie attended to the fracture, and successfully reduced it.

IT was reported at No. 2 station, yesterday, that at about 9 o'clock p.m. on the 1st instant the illegitimate male child of a woman named Letitia Robinson suddenly died at her residence, Cooper-street, Waterloo. Mrs. Donovan, midwife, asserted that the infant was ill from its birth, but had not been attended by any medical man. An inquest will be held on its remains to-day.

AT Lithgow, on Saturday evening, a handsome silver trophy was presented by the employes of the Lithgow Valley Colliery Company to Mr. A. Kerr, the late manager; and an album was presented to Mrs. Kerr.

THE Sandhurst correspondent of the Argus reports that on Friday a sad death by lightning occurred shortly after noon, near the Kangaroo Flat railway station. A man named Martin Moloney, a platelayer on the line, was engaged with three others at the place mentioned. At the time stated the men were at dinner. The deceased and a man named Isaac Griffiths were sitting on a trolly that had been removed from the rails. A thunderstorm came on, and the two men decided to go into a culvert; but just afterwards a flash of lightning came, striking Moloney and killing him instantaneously. Griffiths was also affected by the stroke, and was rendered insensible for a few minutes. Moloney's clothes were torn to shreds. His hat could not be found, and the heels of a heavy pair of blucher boots which he wore were dragged completely off. The injuries to the unfortunate man were described as shocking. The outside skin on being pressed by the fingers peeled off, the face was discoloured, blood was issuing from both ears and the nostrils, the hair was singed off the back of the head, the left leg was broken, both bones being shattered into fragments, both heels were lacerated as if by a knife, and all the bones in their parts were ground up. Two other men, who were eating their dinner in the culvert, a few yards off, felt the shock, but were not injured.

THE Southern Argus reports that an accident which at first it was thought would be very serious occurred to the Australian wire-walker Blondin and a lad whom he was carrying on his back on Friday evening on a vacant piece of land near the St. Clement's Church of England, Goulburn. Several reports are about as to the reason, one being that a horseman most foolishly tied his horse to a support of the guy, and upon some kerosene being thrown on the fire the horse immediately rushed backwards displacing the piece of wood. Another is that the ground being so hard the timber had not been placed in the ground a sufficient depth. Upon Blondin and his companion in peril (who was as heavy as Blondin) getting a short distance along the wire, it was seen to give, and gradually fall in towards the other support of the wire. The presence of mind displayed by Blondin was something surprising. He quietly told his companion not to get flurried or struggle about, but hold on to him tightly, which he did, and Blondin kept walking on the wire in its falling downward incline until within about 10 feet of the ground, when, with a sudden plunge, he threw himself and his burden away from under the falling guy, sustaining nothing further than a slight bruise to his ankle and a good shaking, the lad he was carrying also receiving a very severe shake, and cutting his mouth, which bled a great deal.

THE annual general meeting of the Sydney Chamber of Commerce, postponed from Monday last, will be held this afternoon, at 3 o'clock. The Hon. J. B. Watt, chairman, will move the adoption of the report.

THE PROPOSED SEWERAGE OF SYDNEY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

SIR,—Permit me through the columns of your paper to call the attention of the public to the paragraph appearing in last Saturday's issue, of the nuisance again created by the appearance of a quantity of offal deposited by the sea on the beaches of Bondi and Coogee, there lying and decomposing, the smell of which is intolerable. Not long ago the same nuisance was caused at Manly, and the attention of the Government appeared to be roused, as a promise was given that the barges conveying this matter from the Abbatoirs would, for the future, go out further to sea and dispose of it; but, nevertheless, the current appears to bring it back and discharge it on the shore, rendering the surrounding neighbourhoods most unhealthy.

My object in this letter is to point out the magnitude of the impending evil proposed to be carried out by the discharge of the sewage of the city at Bondi, for if the offal taken out so many miles finds its way back to the shore, what would be the result of the tons upon tons of feculent matter daily discharged only a few yards into the sea? Would it not naturally be forced back by the billows on to the present beautiful beaches, and cause, at high water mark, an enormous line of filthy putrefying matter festering in the hot sun, and breeding germs of fever and disease which every north-east summer wind would carry over to the city—dangerous to the health of those in the immediate neighbourhood, as well as the residents of the surrounding suburbs. Hitherto those beaches have been the favourite resort of pleasure-seekers, as they are within a short drive of the city, and where the fresh ocean breeze can be enjoyed by all, giving health to the invalid. But imagine for a moment the appearance presented by the rocks, for miles covered by the tides with filthy slime, and the beaches strewn with this most offensive material, carried north and south by the various winds and currents.

At present the sewage falls into the harbour, and however great a nuisance it may be, it sinks in the quiet water to the bottom; but at Bondi, from the extent of the proposed scheme, the results will be far different, as it will there be undoubtedly continually churned up and drifted about by the billows.

Surely some other method can be devised—as that employed in Melbourne, where only the liquid matter is allowed to flow into the Yarra, and the solid deodorised and used on the public parks, &c. I think the subject altogether is one that ought to receive the earnest attention of all before arriving at a definite conclusion, for not only would the proposed scheme destroy the value of property, but endanger the life of every inhabitant in the neighbourhood, besides costing the Government an enormous sum of money, and at the same time making them liable to actions at law for loss in consequence. I am, &c.,

A SWISS TRAGEDY.—A tragedy occurred on New Year's Day, at Lausanne. The name of the victim is Paul Janavel. The Janavel family, which is of Piedmontese-Waldensian origin, consisted of the father and mother and two sons, Paul and Ernest, one of whom was 21, the other 18 years of age. M. Janavel was for several years pastor of a church at Genollier, near Nyon; but some time ago he retired from the ministry and went to live at Lausanne. He is said to be a man of stern character and eccentric habits. Paul was destined for the church, and studied theology at the Academy of Lausanne; but he seems to have been a mauvais sujet, a frequenter of cafés, an idle student, and a bad son. He failed in his examination, and was finally expelled from the academy for insulting one of the professors. On this his father refused to support him any longer, and told him he must shift for himself as best he could. Paul, still determined to take his degree, then went to Geneva, entered himself as a student in the University there, and lived for several months nobody knows how. On the first day of the Christmas vacation he returned to Lausanne, where he met with a chilling reception from his parents and his brother Ernest, who was occupied as a copyist in the office of an advocate. He wanted money—2000 f.—but his father would give him none. He next demanded the portion, or a part of it, which would be his by right on his father's death. This demand was also refused. Then, on Wednesday, December 31, he went into his father's rooms, broke open the desk in which he kept his valuables, and took therefrom money and securities worth 13,000 francs. These, it would seem, he intended to keep until his father should consent to pay his debts and make him an allowance, and he asked one of his friends to take charge of them. This the friend declined to do, advising him rather to see his father and mother and try to settle matters amicably. With this view he went home. A violent scene ensued; his parents remonstrated him with the bitterest reproaches, and his brother Ernest in his excitement threatened Paul with a revolver; but the latter, who was much the stronger of the two, easily disarmed him. What became of the money and securities is not stated, but when Paul joined his companions in the evening at a certain café his neck and breast were covered with blood. He said his father had wounded him with a "stove fork," an instrument used for putting fuel into porcelain stoves. He appears to have spent the greater part of the night carousing with his friends, for it was 5 o'clock on the morning of January 1 when he retired to rest in his father's house. What followed is known only to the members of the family. All that is certain is that at 12 o'clock at noon Paul Janavel was lying dead on his bed, with a bullet through his brain. According to the father's account, Ernest entered his room shortly before that hour, saying that he had killed his brother; "Papa, j'ai tué Paul!" were his words, and he held in his hand a still-smoking pistol. The mother could not or would not give any information; she refused even to believe that Paul was dead, and said he would soon be himself again. Ernest Janavel has been removed from the prison where he was first incarcerated to the cantonal lunatic asylum, where he now is raving mad.

LECTURE BY THE LATE AGENT-GENERAL.

LONDON, MARCH 2.

Mr. W. Forster, late Agent-General for New South Wales, delivered a lecture at the Society of Arts, on Colonization, attacking the immigration policy of the Australian colonies, and the political success achieved by men of the worst commercial and social character. His remarks aroused a hot discussion, and Sir Charles Nicholson, Mr. W. T. Torrens, Mr. Julian E. Salamons, and others, warmly combatted the lecturer. The discussion was stopped, on the ground that the lecture was intended for political purposes.

VICTORIA RACING CLUB AUTUMN MEETING.

[By Telegraph.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

The weather was fine to-day, but the races did not cause much excitement. In most of the races the favourites were beaten.

The following are the results:—

HURDLE RACE; about 3 miles.

Mr. R. Howie's ch m Zephyr, 5 years, 8 st 12 lbs 1
J. O. Inglis's b g Nullah, 3 years, 9 st 2 lbs 2
J. B. Gill's br g Rover, aged, 10 st 1 lb 3

S. Mahon's br g Dictator, 5 years, 8 st 7 lbs
F. M'Ginnis's b g Rocket, aged, 9 st 7 lbs.

Sussex and Simpleton were scratched. Joe Thompson, Zephyr, and Rover were the first to show at the front; but Zephyr soon obtained a long lead, Rover and Rocket following. In the second round Rover led for a short distance, but soon gave place to Zephyr. Newmarket, when running well, fell at the river side. The lot closed up when under the hill, and Zephyr, coming again at the home turn, won comfortably by a length and a-half from Nullah. Time: 5 min. 48 sec.

THE PORT PHILLIP STAKES; 2½ miles.

Mr. J. Wilson's b h First King, 5 years 1
Hon. J. White's b h Martindale, 5 years 2
Mr. E. A. Johnson-Boe's br h Wellington, 4 years 3

Wellington made the running, attended by Martindale and First King, until three-quarters of a mile from home, when First King closed up, and the trio went under the hill together. First King led into the straight, and a grand race ensued, the champion winning by half a neck from Martindale, who beat Wellington by half a length. Time, 4 minutes 38½ seconds.

ASCOT VALE STAKES.

Grand Prix, by The Marquis—Art Union 1
Otira, by Maribyrnong—Telopea 2
Haidee of the Hills, by Talk o' the Hills—Pirate's Daughter... 3

Standard Bearer, Nero, Trevallyn, Wentworth, Good Morning, Free Citizen, Flenrette, Western Princess, Cinnamon, Alethe, and Delamere also started.

Delamere led nearly all the way to the rails, then Art Union colt (called Grand Prix) came out in the centre of the field and won by three lengths; Haidee of the Hills third. Time, 1 minute 21 seconds.

BRUNSWICK STAKES; 1¼ mile.

Mr. A. Chirnside's b h Zambesi, 4 years, 7 st 12 lb 1

J. C. Reid's b f Nancy Lee, 3 years, 6 st 5 lbs 0
H. Burrell's ch m Elf, 5 years, 6 st 0

The field got away on good terms. Devilshoof made the running for about half-a-mile; then at the sheds Riverton, Dollar, Monarque, and Zambesi were to the fore. The lot kept well together under the hill, but coming into the straight Zambesi was in front, with Riverton and Monarque, all three slightly leading the others. Zambesi drew out slightly nearing the post, and won by a length and a-half from Monarque, Riverton third. Time, 2 minutes 13 seconds.

VICTORIA ST. LEGER.

Mr. A. K. Finlay's b c Caspian, by King of the Ring—Seaspray 1
R. Howie's gr c Suwarrow, by Snowden—Phizgig 2
G. Bennett's b f Rivalry, by Talk o' the Hill—Proserpine... 3

Belladrum and Petrea also started.

There was a good start, Suwarrow and Rivalry being in front. Suwarrow quickly took the lead, and kept in front with Rivalry, Caspian, Belladrum, Petrea in the order named. Alongside the river Caspian ran into second place, and under the hill all were together, Suwarrow being slightly in advance. Coming round the turn all were in a bunch, and after a splendid race along the straight, Caspian, on the outside, came up, and just won on the post from Suwarrow, Rivalry being third, only half a length behind. Time, 3 minutes 20¾ seconds.

KEILOR STAKES; 1½ mile.

Mr. W. Rawlinson's br h Darriwell, 5 years 1
T. Ivory's Sweetmeat, 4 years 2
E. A. Johnson-Boe's ch h Columbus, aged 3

ROWING ASSOCIATION.

The committee of the New South Wales Rowing Association met on Monday last to make preliminary arrangements for the forthcoming intercolonial eight-oar race. Messrs P. J. Clark and C. Medcalf brought up their report, stating that they had selected Messrs. Stewart, Anslow, Zollner, Gaden, Woodriffe, Bros, Thompson, and Simpson as the representatives of this colony. Although the crew consists of a greater number of junior oarsmen than any previous one, there is good material to work upon. They have already made considerable progress under the tuition of Mr. Medcalf. If some members of the crew lack experience, they have this advantage, their faults are more easily eradicated than those of more mature oarsmen. Mr. P. J. Clark has accepted the position of coach until the departure of the crew to Melbourne. The crew is a much better one than was at first anticipated, and we may yet hope to win the race, provided the men give that attention to practice which is due from them for so important an event. The committee are making arrangements to send them to the post fitted up with the best appliances. Fuller, of Melbourne, has nearly finished the boat, which is reported as being a beauty. Stephenson, of Sydney, is to supply the oars, and Strettles (Sydney) the swivel rowlocks and sliding-seats. It is to be hoped that the patrons of aquatics will not be backward in answering the committee's appeal for funds to maintain the prestige of this colony on the water. The treasurer acknowledged the receipt of £5 5s. from Mr. A. C. Garrick; this constitutes him a life member. The regatta programme and other matters were postponed until next meeting.

CRICKET.

1st Carlton v. 1st Stanmore.—This match was played on Saturday last on the Stanmore ground, and after a very close and exciting game the suburban club were again victorious against a strong team of their opponents. As will be seen from the appended scores, the Carltons were strongly represented in both departments of the game, while the Stanmores, on the other hand, were considerably weakened in the bowling department in consequence of the absence of C. M'Kern and Farnworth. The batting of Sheridan and M'Cres, and the wicket-keeping of Hall for the Carltons, were excellent, the latter especially distinguishing himself behind the wickets. The fielding of both teams throughout the match was good, no chances on either side being missed. The following are the scores:—

AMUSEMENTS.

THE PATTI CONCERTS.

The fifth concert by Madame Carlotta Patti and the company associated with her took place last evening, in the Theatre Royal. The attendance in the stalls was good. The programme contained some numbers of special interest, notably the two movements, the "andante" and allegro moderato of Schubert's trio for piano, violin, and violoncello. We do not remember hearing this great work in Sydney before, and we have protested more than once against the practice of submitting novelties piecemeal. However, we readily admit that to judge from the manner in which the portion was received more would not have been acceptable to the audience generally. The 'cello was undertaken by Mr. De Munck, Signor Ortori was the violinist, and Signor Giorza the pianist. In the andante the piano was scarcely audible—probably that the rich tones of Mr. De Munck's 'cello might have due prominence—the second movement was given with considerable vigour, but it is to us less interesting musically than the andante. The theatre is not well suited for chamber music, and, despite the beauty of the subjects, their scholarly treatment, and the skill of the interpreters, the trio fell flat. Mr. De Munck's first solo, the fantasia on the "Daughter of the Regiment," arranged by M. Joseph Servais (the Professor at the Belgium Conservatoire, and the principal teacher of Mr. De Munck), is a showy piece, the principal subject—the best known melody of the opera—which is most skilfully handled in divers modes; it is less tender than the solo by the same author, elaborated on Schubert's "Le Desir" (which is truly lovely), but it admits of great display by the performer, and of this the interpreter of last night made excellent use. In the second part Mr. De Munck's solo exhibited him as composer and player. The fantasie-stücke affords ample evidence of Mr. De Munck's originality in melody, and of his artistic power to dress his conception appropriately. It was a most enjoyable number, and, for our own part, we would have infinitely preferred a repetition of the instrumental than of the vocal solos from the masculine members of the company. Mr. De Munck was frequently applauded during his meritorious performance of the fantasia by Servais.

The vocal portion of the concert was begun by Mr. Crain, whose voice, we regret to say, was in worse order than on the previous evening. His opening solo, a romanza, from Verdi's "I Lombardi," La mia Letizia was not a successful performance. His intonation was faulty. In the second part, "Let me like a soldier fall," the defects of tone and style were more pronounced, yet such is the popularity of "Maritana" with an Australian audience that Don Cæsar's request was redemanded, and the last verse repeated, not to the satisfaction of the singer. But if Mr. Crain's deficiencies were observable in his solos, in the duet with the accomplished and famous lady vocalist, they were painfully prominent; in the hope that the tenor voice is temporarily out of order we refrain from expressing more plainly our impression of this effort. Signor Ciampi Cellaj has improved much by comparison, his rendering of "Non é ver"—is there any vocalist, male or female, who can resist Tito Mattei's popular song?—was heartily encored, in response "Non m'ama piu," by Tosti, was given with commendable fervour. The second solo, "Cantique de Noel," by Adams, is a grand aria, but it has been heard in Sydney magnificently sung, and the remembrance was not to the advantage of the present singer; nevertheless it was encored, and "The Yeoman's Wedding Song," by Prince Poniatowski, was substituted. This is a capital song, but there is a catchy change in each verse, and here Signor Ciampi-Cellaj disappointed us, he sang in English with very fair success. We have left Mme. Carlotta Patti until the last of the vocalists, because it is a pleasure to keep a good thing in reserve, and also because the perfection of her marvellous and artistic vocalisation was last night more strikingly prominent than on the other nights. Her first song was from Gomes's opera, "Il Guarany," a Brazilian story (the best parts of which are said to be those concerned with native subjects) which was produced first at La Scala, in 1870, and then successively at Genoa, Florence, and Rome, and in 1872 at Covent Garden, London. The song is brilliant and was a triumph of art, and the singer, after three recalls, sang as encore "Reine Topaze," by Masse. Madame Carlotta Patti, in the second part, selected a bolero, composed expressly for her by Theodor Ritter. This accomplished musician is evidently thoroughly familiar with the specialities of the great artiste's voice, and he has composed a bravura aria which exhibits Madame Patti's extraordinary natural and acquired gifts in their most attractive guise. The encore was "La Calesera," by Yradier, with which the audience on Friday last were so charmed. The concluding number, Parigi, O Cara, the duo from "La Traviata," was the most instructive number of the lady contrasted with the tenor and made comparisons inevitable. The visit of Madame Carlotta Patti ought to be an invaluable boon to colonial vocalists. Last night's performance was a rendition in the art of singing. The sixth concert will be given on Thursday evening.

Miss Emma Wangenheim is to receive a complimentary benefit this evening, at the Opera House, on the occasion of her farewell appearances in Sydney. A full house will no doubt greet Miss Wangenheim, who deserves to receive every encouragement which the people of her native city can afford her. Messrs. Kelly and Leon announce only three more nights of "Les Cloches de Corneville." The Lingards will appear on Saturday evening.

The Civil Service Musical Society will give its first concert of the thirteenth season, at the Masonic Hall, this evening. The performance will consist of selections from "Masaniello."

BOATS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—It was with considerable regret that I read a report in this morning's issue of the near case of drowning of three of the crew of the second boat that capsized on Saturday off Shark Island, owing to the boat sinking from under them. Two seasons ago I brought forward a motion in the Sydney Amateur Sailing Club, "That all boats carrying dead ballast competing in the Club races must carry sufficient floating power, in the event of a capsize, not only to float the boat and ballast, but also the crew, and in the event of their not doing so to be disqualified."

I am very glad to say that this rule has been adopted by every regatta committee in the harbour. What I would suggest would be that the Marine Board have the power to prevent boat owners or letters from letting any boat (carrying ballast) for hire without they carried the requisite amount of floating power, on the same principle as the Marine Board protects the interests and lives of the public that patronize the harbour steamers, in the event of their carrying above the registered number.

It is a notorious fact to all sailing men that hired sailing boats are, as a rule, wretchedly rigged and badly found, and that, with bad management, it is a wonder that more accidents do not happen.

I trust, Mr. Editor, that you will use your powerful influence in the matter, and then people, who have not the means or opportunity to keep a boat of their own, will be able to enjoy a sail with confidence, and not be a source of anxiety to their friends while they are afloat.

In conclusion, I may mention that since the adoption of the above rule not a single fatal accident has occurred in any regatta or race in the harbour, although the capsizes are more frequent, owing to the enormous sail that our racers now carry. Apologising for the length of my letter,

I am, &c.,
E. M. DIETRICH,
Hon. Sec. S. A. S. C.

Sydney, March 1.

SYDNEY MECHANICS' SCHOOL OF ARTS.

A special general meeting of members of the Sydney Mechanics' School of Arts was held in the large hall last evening, for the purpose of considering the desirableness of opening the reading-room of the institution on Sundays. It was called in accordance with requisitions, signed by upwards of fifty members of the institution, and in accordance, too, with the 20th Clause of the Act of Incorporation. About 300 members, of whom a few were ladies, attended, and his Honor Judge Windeyer, president of the institution, occupied the chair.

The Chairman, in opening the meeting, stated briefly the object for which it was called, and referred to the provision of the Act of Incorporation, that on receipt of a requisition to that effect, signed by fifty members, a meeting should be called. The subject to be discussed was one which always created considerable interest, and he did not propose to go into it. His own opinion had been pretty well given by his having voted in the Legislative Assembly, and taken a prominent part in the movement, which resulted in the opening of the Public Library and the Museum on Sunday. (Applause.) He hoped that the matter would be discussed here in a calm and dispassionate spirit, as he thought its importance as an agent for the promotion of the moral and intellectual progress of the community warranted it. (Applause.)

Mr. E. A. Jones moved,—"That the opinion of all the members of the institution be taken by circular upon this question, and that the decision of the majority be binding until the next annual meeting." Some discussion on this ensued, several members pointing out that until the desirableness of opening was affirmed or not, the method of voting need not be settled.

The Chairman thought that the opinion of members should be taken in the manner by which they settled whether the reading-room should be upstairs or downstairs, but that it must first be determined what question was to be put before them. They must have some affirmative proposition as to what had brought them together, and then the vote might be taken in any way. They had met to obtain a fair opinion from the members of the institution upon a matter of great importance, and he hoped there would be no attempt on the part of any section of the members to obtain an undue advantage over another. (Applause.)

Mr. Rose moved,—"That it is desirable, in the opinion of this meeting, that on and after Sunday, the 21st March, 1880, the reading-room of this institution be opened between the hours of 2 and 6 every Sunday afternoon, for the use of the members." Knowing that a large number of the members of this institution had no opportunity for reading or intellectual pursuits of any kind except on Sunday afternoon, he moved this resolution wishing them to share the advantages of their more fortunate fellow members. He thought that the working man after going home, cleaning himself, getting his tea, and reading the paper was not disposed to visit the School of Arts at that hour of the night, and as Sunday was the only spare time left to him, he really could not understand the objection to the movement. No one would seek to enforce the attendance of anyone against his will (applause), and as the Sabbatarian would have the power of attending or stopping away as he thought fit, all that was asked for was the same liberty for others. (Applause). One of the arguments brought against the opening was that it involved a certain amount of Sunday labour, and, in reply, he would say that the smallest church in this community involved ten times as much labour. (Applause.) All they wanted was the attendance of one man to see that none but members of the institution entered it on Sunday, and this was not as laborious an occupation as pulling a great heavy bell-rope. And in every church coachmen and footmen were employed on Sunday by the upper classes, and in some cases by the clergyman himself. Then, again, the trains were kept running on Sundays and the railway employés kept busy, and in a great measure were employed by those who had the audacity to call out about Sunday labour. He believed in the doctrine of the greatest good to the greatest number with the least injury to any, and this resolution would bring that about. As an instance that what he now proposed would be popular he would quote the Public Library, which, ever since its opening on Sunday, had been well attended. It was said that this would lead to the opening of other institutions like theatres and dance-houses. He could not see any similarity in the cases, and though personally he knew little about the theatres he believed that, properly conducted, it would be one of the noblest and most effective means for the elevation of society. It appeared to him that what was evil on Sunday was evil on every other day, and that what was bad on Saturday was bad on Sunday. He hoped they would give the working man this opportunity of gaining mental culture. (Applause.)

Mr. Geo. Bright seconded the motion, saying that though it was desirable in cases of this kind to leave out matters theological it was impossible here, and that personally he did not believe in any holy day, or places, or time. He advocated the opening of every institute like this on Sunday as on other days, and maintained that a great point made was that those opposed to the motion sought, not only liberty for themselves, but to crush out the liberty of those opposed to them. (Applause.) He thought that those who went in for Sunday observation did not practise what they preached.

Mr. Montagu Levy proposed to the mover and seconder that instead of the reading-room being opened from 2 to 6 every Sunday afternoon all the year round, this time be observed in spring and summer, and that in autumn and winter the time be from 2 to 5.

The suggestion was agreed to, and the resolution was amended accordingly.

Mr. E. A. Jones opposed the motion, saying that the institution had now been established forty years, and no one had ever asked for the change proposed. (Cries of "Oh, oh.") The question was, whether the opening or closing of the reading-room was more in the spirit of enlightenment and progress, and he thought that to close it on the Sabbath was the better course. (Applause.) With regard to mental improvement he would point out that in the reading-room only newspapers and magazines were placed, and that the books in the library could be taken home by members on Saturday night to be read on Sunday. It was said that the opening of theatres and places of that kind would not follow the opening of the reading-room, but in California, at least, this had followed on a similar course of action. (Applause.) There the working man had lost his day of rest, and he thought they would purchase here their Sunday half-holiday by the sacrifice of the Saturday one—(Applause)—and which he thought that nineteen-twentieths of the working men of Sydney enjoyed. It was a notorious fact that not only was concerted opposition made to the closing of the reading-room, but that pastorals had been issued in the theatres to make people come and vote for the opening. If this latter came to pass, he would bow to the majority, but he wished to offer the most uncompromising opposition to this motion, and to hazard the opinion that it would form the subject of several meetings yet. (Loud and prolonged applause.)

Mr. Burn asked if his friends were not aware that there were books of reference in the reading-room, and said he should support the motion.

Mr. Pottie thought they should consider whether it would injure the institution or not to pass this motion. It was said that the members had not opportunity for reading, but, with eight hours of labour, this excuse would not serve. The next was that the working man had very long hours of labour, but the officers of the institution had very far worse times, and nothing was said of them. There was nothing to be gained by this opening, which would destroy the Sabbath, the heirloom of the working man, and a sacred trust to him for generations. In this, as in other institutions, there were many men who would not, on conscientious reasons ally themselves with anything which would desecrate the Sabbath. He was certain that this movement would bring detriment on the institution which but two years ago was in dregs and dust, and scarcely known.

Mr. Whalley believed that Sunday should be a day of rest for everybody, and that the opening of the reading room would give them nothing fresh to be learned. He thought they had not the slightest authority for regarding Sunday as a sacred day—(Uproar)—since it was changed, in the time of Constantine the Great, and he should heartily support the resolution. (Cheers and hisses.)

Mr. G. H. Reid thought that the proposer and seconder of the resolution thought very little of the facilities for study when they restricted the hours from 3 to 5. Why did they not ask to open the institution on Sunday as well as every other day, since, if they were so thirsty for mental instruction, three hours of the day would not be enough for them. Men who were unable to get there during the week should not have the library closed on them, and so why should not the room downstairs, as well as that upstairs be opened. Again, if they were unable to come between 9 a.m. and 10 p.m. on six days of the week, they could not visit booksellers' shops to buy books, and why should not these shops be opened for them on Sunday. And the grocer, &c., might follow suit, and so the argument went in favour of increasing instead of reducing the amount of labour on Sunday. Sunday was invaluable to the poor man, and he would resist the thin end of the wedge, which would be driven home in days to come, to lessen the comforts and independence of the working man. (Applause).

Mr. E. P. Field, on rising, said that Mr. Reid had put to the meeting a very pertinent question when he asked why the institution was not opened on Sundays. But instead of answering that question, Mr. Reid had run off into a sentimental eulogy of the clergy. Every one recognized the virtues of the clergy as a class, but their character had nothing to do with the question before the meeting. He would urge them to look at that question in a purely practical light, to consider the instances of other towns where the experiment had been tried, and then to decide. In Manchester, in Liverpool, in Dunedin, in Hawke's Bay, and Wellington, the athenæums and reading rooms had been opened on Sundays, with markedly beneficial results. He further wished to say one word in answer to an objection with regard to the employment of the extra labour on Sundays. He would submit it to them whether that objection could not be entirely met by putting the work in the hands of those who held the Hebrew faith. In this way no one could have any cause for complaint.

The Rev. Mr. Kirby thought that the Sabbath was greatly desecrated now, and that they should go no further in the direction of secularising the day. He thought the question should be remitted to the whole body of the members and decided by a plebiscite.

Mr. Charles Bright thought that a large section of the members were desirous of using the reading-room on Sunday, and that they would not press their claim if they thought they would be injuring the institution. He then referred to several colonial towns where similar institutions were opened to members on Sunday, and argued that as they were clubs on the joint-stock principle, the reading rooms should not be closed to members desirous of entering. He pressed that the opinion of the meeting be taken, and be held final.

Mr. H. Daley also advocated the opening.

Mr. Taylor opposed it.

Mr. J. Hodgson supported it. (Cries of "Vote! vote!")

Mr. M'Cormack pointed out that not one of those who spoke professedly in the interests of the working-man against the change were actually working-men.

Mr. Gandon thought they should adjourn. (Cries of "Vote, vote.")

Mr. Gillam moved,—"That this decision this evening be referred to a plebiscite."

Mr. Hall seconded the motion, and considerable confusion arose owing to the efforts of a number of those present to have the matter settled, and the eagerness of certain gentlemen to speak.

Finally the Chairman put the question in favour of the matter being at once decided, which was carried by a good majority, amid a storm of cheers. He then put the question as to the opening of the reading-room on Sundays, which was carried by a narrow majority. A division was called for and taken, the result being that the Chairman declared that, with the concurrence of several committeemen, he believed those in favour of opening to be in the majority. A furious uproar ensued, and some few having become calm enough to pass a vote of thanks to the Chairman, the meeting terminated, and subsequently Mr. Alx. Kethel entered a protest against the decision, and formally demanded that a poll of the members should be taken on the question.

THE RAINFALL OF 1879.

A very carefully prepared and elaborate table, by Mr. H. C. Russell, Government Astronomer, showing the rainfall as measured at 151 stations in New South Wales during last year, was published in last week's Sydney Mail. The table forms a very valuable contribution to the meteorological records of the colony. In his prefatory remarks, Mr. Russell thus generalises the results of his calculations:—

"The Rainfall Return for 1879 shows the rain measured at 151 stations, nearly double the number published last year. To a large extent this increase in number of stations is evidently a response to my appeal for additional observers last year, and I am glad of this opportunity of thanking all who have been kind enough to assist me in this work. I am sure it is one that is well worth the doing, and I hope others will join us in collecting statistics which will hereafter prove invaluable in estimating our probable seasons. Each year's statistics adds another link to the chain of "experience" upon which we must act for the future; and whether we adopt any cycle or not in our estimate of future seasons, it is all-important that our experience should be made as extensive and complete as possible. We want to know the rainfall all over the colony, so that we may see the limits of local droughts, and when and under what circumstances they may recur. I will not here enter upon the general question of cycles of seasons, for so much may be said on that subject; but since I produced in 1876 some of the arguments in favour of a period of 19 years, and indicated by tables the probable character of subsequent years, it is worth while to see whether 1879 accords with this theory, as each of the other subsequent years has done. It is obvious that the history of the past year, upon the study of which the nineteen-years period rested, was necessarily confined to the coast districts; and for the purpose of comparison I take the rainfall at Sydney; but each year's observations tend to prove that the season at Sydney may be taken as a sample of the average over the colony. Of course there are local exceptions, but, a good year in Sydney is a good year generally, and a bad year in Sydney is a bad year generally.

"Taking the monthly rainfalls measure at Sydney for the years of the cycle to which 1879 belongs, we have—

—	Jan.	Feb.	March	April.	May.	June.	July.	Aug.	Sept.	Oct.	Nov.	Dec.
1841.	5·63	0·53	3·83	2·43	6·78	1·73	11·11	1·47	4·20	7·05	4·85	4·25
1860.	6·57	10·87	5·23	2·02	0·18	2·81	11·95	0·43	2·84	4·08	7·29	1·75
1879.	9·14	3·69	2·67	1·86	12·12	5·90	1·25	10·17	14·06	2·96	5·56	1·81

The above figures give a total for 1841 of 76·31; for 1860, 82·81; and for 1879, 65·20.

"We here see a very great similarity in the character of the rainfalls as well as their amounts for each season. A striking difference is, however, manifest in April. In 1841 it gave 25 inches; 1860, 20 inches; 1879, only 2 inches. But in 1841 20·12 inches of the 25 inches fell in one furious storm on the 29th April; and 29th April, 1860, yielded 7·52 inches rain, which, together with the three previous days made a total of 16·81 inches in four days; but in 1879 we missed this furious rain storm at the end of April. May, however, produces 12·12 inches, and on 16th a severe S.W. storm with thunder, lightning, and very heavy rain, from 2 to 5 p.m. during which rain fell at the rate of 2 inches per hour. The January rains, and abundant autumn and spring rains, mark those years as very similar, and the total for 1879 only wanted the heavy shower in April to make it equal to the others.

"An inspection of the table for 1879 will show that, excepting the south-western part of the colony, which seems to have shared the dry weather prevalent in Victoria, the rainfall has been abundant, and in many places, especially on coast and northern districts, very heavy."

SERIOUS FLOODS IN VICTORIA.

The Argus of February 28th reports that a heavy fall of rain had taken place throughout the country districts, and in many instances the much-wished-for downpour has been so extensive that serious floods have resulted in consequence. In Melbourne rain fell with few intermissions throughout the day. About half-past 10 o'clock on Friday, a woman named Annie Kimberley, 45 years of age, living at 18, Little Lonsdale-street, slipped off the kerbstone and fell into the channel at the corner of Elizabeth and Lonsdale streets, and was carried by the force of the current under the footbridge. Upon being got out by a bystander, and taken to the Melbourne Hospital, she was found to have fractured her knee-cap. The railway lines in the country districts have, in several instances, been much damaged by the floods, and it may be noted that the traffic manager of the Victorian Railway Department has received telegrams from the stationmasters on the Dunolly and St. Arnaud and Ararat lines, announcing that portions of the lines have been inundated and considerable injury has been done by the washing away of the ballast. The stationmaster at Boalibra reports that a heavy flood at the bridge near gate No. 66, on the St. Arnaud side, has rendered it unsafe for traffic. The ballast has been completely washed away, and the same thing has occurred near No. 55 gate, on the Dunolly side. A telegram had been sent to the inspector at Maryborough, advising him to stop at all bridges between Dunolly and St. Arnaud. At St. Arnaud the line for about a quarter of a mile has been covered by flood water, which swept away the approaches to the first culvert, and the permanent way from under the rails, so that the only connection between the culvert and the road is by the rails alone. The culvert is in danger of being swept away at any moment. The rain continues without showing signs of ceasing. The stationmaster at Carisbrook reports that the heavy rains have greatly injured the permanent way, and on Thursday night the late train ran off the line. The engine and the first truck parted company with the rest of the train. A second-class carriage was broken up, and one passenger was severely injured and conveyed to the Maryborough Hospital. Traffic on the line has been suspended, but gangs of men have been set to work to repair the damage as speedily as possible. Heavy floods have also occurred on the Ararat line, and portions of the permanent way have been washed away.

A LABOUR SCHOONER IN A HURRICANE.

(From the Fiji Argus, February 6.)

The Agnes Donald, a fore-and-aft schooner of 62 tons, Captain John Williams, left Havannah harbour, New Hebrides Group, on the 20th ultimo, with 58 Polynesian recruits on board, bound for Fiji. On the 21st, the position of the schooner was about 45 miles north-east of Erromango Island. The weather was squally, with a strong wind from east-south-east. At noon the barometer had fallen to 29·30, with the wind increasing and an unusually high sea running. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon the glass was down to 29·15, and still falling. The captain then, seeing that he had not yet had the worst of it, housed his topmasts and got both his boats on deck, and secured them with double lashings, and hove the schooner to under a close-reefed foresail. The barometer kept on falling steadily, and the wind and sea increasing. At 10 o'clock the Polynesians were all sent below, and the hatches battened down. At midnight the barometer had reached 28·70, and was still falling, and the gale increasing. Captain Williams then furled his close-reefed foresail, and laid to with a sea anchor—i. e., a kedge was let go with 30 fathoms of chain on to it, and a huge block of wood securely fastened to the chain at some distance from the anchor, the object being to keep the ship's head to the

OUR ROME LETTER.

ROME, JAN. 17.

This is one of the coldest winters on record in Rome and all over central Italy. Hard frost set in before Christmas, snow fell heavily in the city for a night and a day; the countless fountains of the Eternal City were frozen over, and their statues draped in icicles; and although the sun shines constantly in a cloudless sky, he is powerless to melt the ever-renewing frosts of night. When one is forced to go out on necessary business in the mornings, it requires a strong effort to face the keen tramontana wind which meets one at every street corner. The natives hurry about muffled up to the eyes in cloaks and furs. Few old people are seen out of doors, and the poor take refuge (scaldino in hand) in the churches, which are hospitably open to all, the greater part of the day. It seems to be the general opinion, however, that this severely cold weather will do no harm, and all consider it preferable to the mild and rainy winter of 1879. Many travellers from the north began to flock in before Christmas, and most of the principal hotels publish long lists of arrivals in the daily papers. King Humbert came to Rome early in the season, and has been boar-hunting several times in the extensive forests which border the seashore south of the Tiber mouth. Queen Margherita was detained by ill health at Bordighera until after New Year's Day, and although now much improved, she is not allowed by her physicians to undertake any State receptions, or to go out in the evening. All who see her Majesty on her daily drives regret to notice her pale and altered looks. Many reports are current as to the causes of her delicate health, and ill-natured party gossip has run riot on the subject. But the most rational solution is that given by her doctors, that the beloved Queen Margherita has suffered from the shock to her nerves, caused by the attempt on King Humbert's life in November, 1878. She exercised too much self-control at the time, and went through all the fatigues of the following season even too bravely. But the words she used in speaking of the attack, no doubt, give a key to the impression which has sunk deep in her mind:—"The poetry of the House of Savoy is over, now that we cannot go about without guards within a yard of our carriage!" And now the Pearl of Italy, the Angel of Savoy, is as weak and hysterical as any other mortal woman, and living in constant dread of sudden and violent death in these days when, as the Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria wittily remarked, "hunting down Sovereigns is the prevailing sport, and never out of season."

On the occasion of this last Christmas, Pope Leo XIII. ordained the revival in the Roman churches of many of the ancient customs peculiar to the season. There was, in Santa Maria Maggiore, the exhibition and procession of the Holy Manger, which had been disused since 1870, and people went in crowds to see the relic and listen to the music of the beautiful pastorale. The church of Ara Coeli was also a wonderful spectacle, both within and without, during the whole octave of the festival; and, on the Epiphany Day, the famous Bambino, crowned, and covered with diamonds, was carried in procession, and blessed the assembled crowds, and laid in his presessio, or cork hut, with life-size figures of Mary and Joseph, the shepherds and wise men, was visited by hundreds of all ranks. Little children, mounted on small platforms, recited daily the dialogue of the shepherds; and the celebrated Franciscan tenor, Padre Giovanni, poured forth his sweet and powerful notes in the choir behind the high altar. Leaving the church by the front door, the steep and broken flight of 124 ancient white marble steps presented the usual sight, so frequently described by travel-writers on Rome. Numbers of "ambulating shops" were established at intervals on the broader steps. The wares offered for sale were images and pictures of the Madonna and Bambino, rosaries, prayers, almanacs, toys—nothing of higher price than a half-penny was demanded for each separate article. An unceasing stream of men, women, and children, ascended and descended the steps all day, and the only wonder was that notwithstanding the profusion of orange rinds scattered everywhere, no one seemed to slip or fall down the steep flight. Something different from older times is the recently erected iron railing with its barred gate at the bottom, which is locked at night and prevents the peasants who throng to Rome for the Church festivals from sleeping as formerly on the steps. The Epiphany fair was as merry and noisy as usual in Piazza Navona. The Roman papers seem ashamed of what they call these barbaric customs. Nevertheless, grave looking and elderly visitors from northern countries find the popular gaiety infectious, and join in shrill piping and trumpet blowing with the youngest, not to mention the firing of cheap pistols with percussion cups. The nature of these southern peoples must be changed before they will give up the public expression of their feelings whether joyful or sorrowful. In England at Christmas-tide, the family festival, the elders relax from the seriousness of life, and join for a little in the children's merriment within doors, and "amongst themselves." The Italians, especially the lower orders, look for a great deal of sympathy all around, and as they live in the open air they make it resound with their Befana fun annually, no matter whether the thermometer be ever so unusually low, or the clouds charged with sirocco. Befana is a corruption of Epiphany; then, —not at Christmas or New Year, as with us—all the Roman children receive their presents in memory of the Three Wise Men who brought gifts to Christ. Befana is symbolised as an old woman, who brings a rod for naughty children, but gifts for the good. The custom is as old as Christianity. In ancient Pagan times here the New Year had a goddess called Strenia, who brought presents to the small Romans of those distant days, and whose name can easily be recognised in the French etrennes for new year offerings.

The prolonged drought of last summer and autumn has occasioned much distress amongst the poor and working classes of Italy. In Rome the rich have been exerting themselves to alleviate as much of the misery as possible by many charitable efforts. The "economic kitchens" established in the four quarters of the city have worked well, and in a great measure succeeded in at least feeding the hungry. They were established by the Catholic societies, and intended to make up for the loss of the numerous convents where the poor were daily fed, and which have all been expropriated since 1870. But the City government co-operated with them by the purchase of some thousands of their tickets, so that the charity has not been confined to any religious or political party. The Infant Asylums always benefit at this time of year by a contribution from the leaders of society. The name of each person who pays two francs is inserted in a list published in the leading papers, and that is understood as exempting them from the duty of paying the enormous number of visits, or rather the sending of cards, customary on New Year's Day. This practice was initiated by some of the Roman princesses who patronise the charity. The Pope bestowed 15,000 francs on the poor of Rome, to be distributed by the parish priests, as soon as he heard of the general distress. His Holiness is distinguishing himself by great liberality and kindness towards the studious who are desirous of consulting the archives of the Vatican library. He has appointed a commission of learned men to catalogue the treasures of antique lore stored up in those splendid halls. On the whole Pope Leo XIII. is a popular Pontiff, but he is displeasing the Jesuits by the impulse he is giving to the revival of the scholastic philosophy in seats or learning. People shrug their shoulders and make grimaces at the mention of St. Thomas Aquinas and his "Summa." Only the students of Dante (and they are increasing in number) sympathise with the Pope, and are watching curiously how it will fare with Aquinas in this age of hydra-headed scepticism. With the first day of 1880 appeared the Aurora, a new Catholic paper in which Leo XIII. directly takes much interest, and whose politics, although it professes merely to follow the Pope's actions, are, nevertheless, correctly thought to be inspired by the Holy Father himself. On the title page is a quotation in Latin and Italian from his speech to the representatives of the Press on the 22nd of last February: "Proclaim that the public affairs of Italy will never prosper nor enjoy stable tranquillity until the dignity of the Roman See and the liberty of the Supreme Pontiff are provided for as every reason requires." The Aurora, even so early in its existence, is already making a sensation, and that on subjects the interest of which spreads widely beyond the Italian peninsular. To begin with what most nearly touches ourselves, the Aurora openly declares for Home Rule and a National Parliament in Ireland. Very moderate and mild in expresson is the article written on this question, but none the less decided in tone, so that the British Government may at least plainly know the line of conduct to be expected from the Roman Catholic priests in Ireland, should matters there become complicated. Another question is the divorce recently granted by the Pope of the Prince and Princess of Monaco, which has roused that determined enemy of the Papacy, La Capitale, to make a furious attack upon all the Popes, from Charlemagne's time down to the present age, and the Aurora is occupied in a series of replies in justification of the Popes. The story of the Monaco divorce makes one of the saddest domestic tragedies in high life ever made public. The ducal family of Hamilton is nearly related to the Bonapartes, through the Dowager Duchess who was Princess Mary of Baden, the daughter of the celebrated Grand Duchess Stephanie Beauharnais. When the late Duke of Hamilton died in 1863, Napoleon III. became the legal guardian of his youthful daughter, Lady Mary Hamilton, a girl of twelve. The French Emperor disliking the idea of the well-dowered young lady marrying into some Princely German house, determined to bestow her hand on a petty Prince devoted to him from political reasons, and for this purpose selected the Prince of Monaco. Napoleon then, and his Empress Eugenie, were the makers of this marriage which was to end so deplorably. When Lady Mary was eighteen she was introduced to the Prince Hereditary of Monaco, aged 20, at a banquet, and they saw a good deal of each other at the Chateau of Machais. But the young lady, instead of becoming attached to her intended bridegroom, showed from the first a decided aversion to him, which increased to abhorrence, and she constantly declared to her mother that it would be quite impossible for her to marry him. Had her mother listened to the unhappy girl, all would have ended there. But the Duchess of Hamilton herself was not a free agent. The Emperor willed that marriage, and everybody knows how tenacious he was in his purposes. He could injure the family to whom he had ever shown kindness, and the widowed mother's courage to resist was naught. She reasoned with her daughter, threatened, entreated, and insisted on the marriage. In vain the girl wept and prayed; in vain fled from the sight of her abhorred fiance; in vain she lost the freshness of her eighteen years;—her mother, either unable to resist Napoleon's will, or trusting that time would diminish her daughter's aversion, was not to be entreated, and determined to go through with the ill-omened marriage. Lady Mary Hamilton was literally led like a victim to the sacrifice dressed and crowned with flowers, protesting to her mother to the last that there was an abyss between her and the Prince, that she never could love him or hold him for her husband. The religious rites were forced upon her, and by force she was made a wife. The smiling sky of Monaco had no charms for the unhappy girl, the palace was a prison from which she was ever trying to escape, even by climbing over the walls. Every three or four days she was flying to her mother who then lived at the neighbouring city of Nice, and when the Prince came to take her back, she rushed from one friend to another imploring shelter. When taken back to Monaco her despair was such that her doctor, fearing for her life, prayed the so-called husband to keep out of her sight. This cruel existence continued from the time of her marriage in September, 1869, to the end of January, 1870, when, pregnant, she left the Prince's house for the last time, notwithstanding the entreaties of Pius IX. and many illustrious friends. Thus, when Lady Mary Hamilton, says the Aurora, presented her demand to the Holy See that her marriage with the Prince of Monaco should be dissolved, what remained for the Pope to do but to command the most accurate inquiries into all the circumstances, and it having been proved that the free consent of the woman was absolutely wanting, the Church has granted the divorce, after nine years' consideration of the cause. But to the Prince of Monaco is conceded the tutelage of the son born of this forced marriage. But the Capitale although strongly in favour of divorce, and zealous to tear marriage altogether out of the jurisdiction of the Church, chooses to accuse the Pope of granting this divorce for a female caprice, because the lady is rich! And as I said before, the annals of history are ransacked for similar cases, and even the Popes are made responsible for Henry the Eight's divorce, because Cranmer was a consecrated bishop, and the Aurora has plenty to do in replying to this active foe.

In the political world—indeed, it would be more correct to say the political "village"—of Italy, the same wearisome unceasing struggle of party politics, in which personal interests and animosities prevail over every patriotic sentiment, still goes on. Of how many political crises, of the formation of how many new Cabinets! I have informed you since this time last year, it is scarcely an exaggeration to say I cannot remember without stopping to calculate, but unless that which is most unexpected happens, another will be added to the list before the steamer which is to carry this letter shall have left the Port of Brindisi. The abolition of the Grist Tax Bill, again brought before Parliament, again voted by an overwhelming majority, is again being violently combatted in the Senate, and it may be considered certain will again be to all intents and purposes thrown out, with this variation of procedure to the same end. The iniquity of a tax weighing disproportionately upon the poorer classes, and increasing in weight as the poverty is the greater, is acknowledged. The Senate owns that the tax, for that and other reasons, cannot be retained; to use the Italian term, it is not only condemned but dead beyond hope. But the Senate will not listen to its being abolished by a Government of the Left. The Senate, however, in face of public opinion and the stubborn fact of the bill being repeatedly sent up with increasing majorities from the Chamber, cannot absolutely negative it as before, and therefore have, I may say, decided to throw it out on an order of the day, which is equivalent to a vote of want of confidence in the Government. The tax yields, or did yield a year ago, 80,000,000 of francs, or a little more than £8,000,000 sterling annually. This was diminished by the concession the Senate was forced to make the last time the bill was before them, namely, the abolition of that small portion of the tax which relates to the grinding of maize and other flours of inferior quality eaten by that most miserable portion of the peasant population, who never taste wheaten bread. The remainder it is proposed to abolish by four diminutions—one-fourth part to be taken off during this present year, and so on, until the last is abolished in 1883. To provide for the deficiency in income this would occasion, supposing the national income were a fixed amount, the Government calculate partly on that gradual increase of revenue which, through the development of Italian industry, manufacture, and other resources, has been going on for some time to the extent of more than 10 millions of francs a year, and which may be expected to make the income of 1883 40 millions more than that of 1879, and for the remainder, or as much more as the annual income may fall short of the increase hitherto verified, they rely on the produce of new taxes to be imposed as required. What these taxes are to be, the Government have informed the Senate, and, of course, the nation, but the majority of the Senate insists, in short, that these new taxes must all be voted and brought into operation, in order to prove their capacity for filling the void the want of the grist tax may occasion, before they can proceed to vote its abolition, and in expression of the opinion of the majority, or what it is confidently believed will prove to be the majority, the reporter on the bill, who sides with that majority, has proposed that the discussion of the bill shall be suspended until the Government have made such provisions in place of the grist tax as the Senate may deem sufficient. It would be idle for me to enlarge on the vagueness of this suspensory motion, or the absurdity of requiring the Government to impose taxes at the beginning of 1880 to supply the place of one of which three-fourths will be levied until June, 1881, one-half until June, 1882, and a quarter until June, 1883. The motion, as I have said, is a covered, but distinct, expression of want of confidence; in that sense the Ministers consider it, and, should it be voted, and that vote will be taken either to-morrow or the day after, we shall have what will be to some extent equivalent to another crisis, and all parliamentary business will be stopped for a longer time than any resignation of Ministers and formation of a new Administration would necessitate. The Ministers will not resign, but they will close the parliamentary session, name a number of new senators, open the new session almost immediately with a speech from the Throne recommending the abolition of the tax, bring forward the bill again before the Chamber, and again send it back to the Senate, and of this result the cables will inform you before my letter can arrive, unless, at the last moment, the good sense and patriotism of some of the senators should prompt them to avoid this scandal by setting aside party feelings and animosities, and giving those votes against the suspensory motion which will turn the scale in favour of the abolition.

We hear from time to time of the death of another of the survivors of the battles of Trafalgar and Waterloo. They are noted as the extinction of the few remaining living links which bind us to a time which seems already to belong to the distant past; but on Friday, the 26th December last, a veteran soldier, General Avezzana, passed away who had fought as a private in the great Napoleon's army at the battles of Hanau and Leipsic. His life may almost be considered as a military and political romance, so eventful was it in every way. He was the senior of all those living who have struggled and suffered for Italian unity and freedom. He first became a conspirator and revolutionist, as the Italian patriots were then called, in 1821. He was three times condemned to death—twice by the Sardinian Government, and once by martial law in Spain He had to spend many years in exile from his native country. He was a cattle dealer at New Orleans; a wine seller at New York; an officer, and finally as general of the Republican forces in Mexico, and there he fought many battles, and gained many victories. In Mexico he made the acquaintance of his friend and companion in arms, until death—Guiseppe Garibaldi. When Pius IX. fled from Rome, and the Republic under a triumvirate was established, and when Garibaldi with his red-shirts was fighting for it, Avezzana was Minister of War in that Government. It was after the taking of Rome by the French that he had to fly from Italy a second time, for his second condemnation to death for participation in the revolutionary movement in Genoa at the beginning of 1849 was still hanging over him. When the war of 1859, between Italy and Austria, broke out, Avezzana could not resist the impulse to return. He joined Garribaldi, who received him with open arms, fought gallantly at the battle of the Volturno, and on the field Garibadi appointed him Lieutenant-General with the command of a division—and that appointment the Government, overlooking his condemnation and recognizing his services, confirmed. In 1861 he was elected a deputy to the Italian Parliament in which he sat until a few days only before his death, and on the 28th of last month he was buried with all the honours a nation and a Government could confer. In politics he belonged to the extreme Left, but the organs of all parties—the clerical of course excepted—joined in praise of the man and the patriot, and claimed a national funeral for him. The streets were crowded along the whole extent through which the procession passed. The Generals and officers of the army in Rome, the representatives of all the public bodies, political, administrative, and educational, the trade societies with their banners, the Ministers, Senators, and Deputies, all walked in it, while an immense line of carriages brought up the rear, and among those carriages was that of the King of Italy. The coffin was conveyed on a splendid funeral car, and the eight cordons of the pall were held by Signor Tecchio (President of the Senate) as representing the Upper House, Signor Tajani (ex-Minister of Grace and Justice and Vice-President of the Chamber of Deputies) as representing the Lower House, Don Emanuel Ruspoli, Syndic of Rome, representing the Municipality; Signor Cairoli (Prime Minister) as representing the Government, General Bonelli (Minister of War) as representing the Army, Signor Menotti Garibaldi as representing his father, General Garibaldi; Signor De Romano (son-in-law of General Avezzana) as representative of the family, and lastly, a representative of Isernia, the constituency for which Avezzana sat. Alas, this splendid demonstration of respect to the memory of the dead was marred by an attempt of the Italia Irredenta party to make political capital out of it. General Avezzana had been president of the association to promote that aim. The Government, in consenting to take part in the funeral, had distinctly made it understood that no banners, emblems, flags relating to the Irredenta movement should be displayed, or speeches made. This understanding was, with great want of good faith, broken by the Irredentists. They intruded themselves alongside the funeral car, even to taking hold of the pall after the procession had started. They were known men, namely, Imbriani and Sulmona, and therefore Cairoli and the other officials left the procession, but without causing any interruption or public remark at the instant. But, finally, when the procession reached the cemetery, the Irredentists displayed flags, the police interfered, and a commotion followed. Imbriani has endeavoured, through a pamphlet, to throw the responsibility on the Ministers, but they have declared it devoid of truth, and Imbriani's own friend, Menotti Garibaldi, has confirmed the Ministerial declaration.

STREET RAILWAYS IN SAN FRANCISCO.

A correspondent of the Otago Daily Times contributes the following information to that journal with reference to the street tramways of San Francisco:—"I think I may fairly claim that street railroads built San Francisco. If it had not been for them, it would have been impossible for the bulk of the population to have gone out so far as they have, over and beyond the high hills and sand-dunes of what was once Yerba Buena. Land was bought in large tracts, cut up into homestead lots, a street railroad built, and the land sold. Elegant residences soon covered the sand-dunes, and the city spread out fan-like, at first skirting the high ridges, but ultimately creeping up them. The roads were operated at first by horse-cars, but the steep grade was too much for them in many places, and the best residence sites in the city were practically inaccessible by street cars. This was too much for Yankee enterprise to submit to, and cable railroads were invented, which are destined to revolutionize the whole business of street railroading. They will supersede horse-cars and street motors, and will save enormous sums to municipalities and property-owners in grading their streets. No need now for heavy cuts, disfiguring the natural features of a town site. The cable railroad makes travel more rapid, as cheap, more certain, and far more agreeable than upon the ordinary horse-car track, on the steepest grade. Where grades are very difficult the cable road must be adopted. The Philadelphia motor is of use in its own place, but it can never compete with the noiseless gliding cars, which run up hill and down dale, shoot along the level, stop at a touch on the side of the steepest incline, and take up their running again without jar or strain, without horse or steam-engine, or other visible motor. The risk of accident by the cable road is absolutely nil. Ladies and children prefer riding on the handsome dummy in front of the car, in which the driver stands to manage the lever-break; and very often families make excursions for miles upon them to enjoy the exhilarating ride for a few cents who cannot afford a trip across the bay. No one in San Francisco thinks of walking a couple of blocks, except it is some eccentric being who think he is improving his health by wearing out his muscle. I certainly don't. One can ride in a comfortable car a distance of over four miles for five cents, and go almost in any direction or anywhere. It is street railroads which have rendered the district telegraph system possible. They are also among the very best investments in the city. To show the appreciation in which they are held, I may mention the Geary-street cable road, in course of construction. It will not be operated before February, and although 20 dollars per share has only been paid in calls, and there is a very large outlay, the company's stock is selling at a premium of 23 dollars per share. The California-street railroad is a close corporation. It belongs to Stanford and Co., who own and operate the Market-street and Valencia lines to the Ferry, and it is quoted at 120 dollars per share, but you can't buy any. Clay-street cable road paid an average of 40 per cent. since opening. The Sutter-street railroad has been built out of earnings, besides paying dividends, and it is now the most extensive cable road in the city. The other street-car roads in the city pay handsomely, and are regarded as safe permanent investments. But the heavy cost of operating a railroad with horses, and the loss on the animals, is much greater than operating a cable road with stationary engines. I have taken pains to investigate this subject, and have had every facility for understanding it thoroughly from the railroad managers of this city, and I am therefore speaking of knowledge. At least five, if not more, new franchises have been granted to build cable roads, so that we shall soon have them operating in all directions. Stock in them will always be at a premium. There is no more difficulty in operating them than there is with the ordinary horse-car lines. Cable roads cross each other's tracks, and can now be built quite as cheaply as the horse-car track. Horses do not take fright at them and they don't interfere with horse or foot traffic so much as the old style railroads. I hope soon to hear that Cavershame and Ocean Beach have been brought into 15 to 20 minutes' distance of High-street junction with Princes-street by means of a cable road."

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. OUR BRISBANE LETTER.

BRISBANE, FEB. 23.

The career of the adventurer who gave himself out as "the Pilgrim," has been arrested for a period of twelve months. This worthy had projected for himself fame and money, by the publication of some of that literature of blackguardism which is being attempted at the present time in most of the colonies. The Fates, however, have been against him, and Graham Fenton's pilgrimage has resolved itself into twelve months' hard labour in gaol. He must have failed anyhow. The solitary number of the Pilgrim, published in Brisbane, was enough. It was vicious without being racy, personal without being caustic or funny, and altogether an ungrammatical jumble of vulgar fastness and purposeless scurrility. The day after the publication a cabman and innkeeper were in wait to thrash the "Pilgrim," and perhaps it was well for him, personally, that by extending his literary operations to Mr. Lingard's signature on a bank-cheque, he was consigned to a place where he would be shielded from all his enemies.

The advocates of free trade need not, at least as yet, apprehend serious doings from the Queensland Protectionist Association. For weeks an inaugural meeting was advertised, and paragraphs from time to time almost led the public to believe that the date of that gathering would be synonymous with the date of a new and golden era for the colony. The new president Mr. Meston, M.L.A., the youthful and the eloquent, was to be installed with much ceremonial pomp; and (to borrow from the subsequent report) a "liberal provision of tea, cake, fruit, and other delicacies" was to prelude the feast of reason and flow of soul. Alas, even as a tea-fight and muffin-worry, the event was a failure; the attendance, all told, would not be more than 150, and that it was a failure from the higher point of view was seen in the fact that the major half of the audience consisted of women and children who, protectionists though they might be in theory, displayed decided free trade tendencies at the tea table. Mr. Meston did his best under these depressing circumstances, and the good ladies and their little ones tried to look both interested and wise, as he worked round to the old glories of the Roman Republic. He ridiculed the so-called free trade principles of New South Wales, and was fearfully heavy upon Chinese and Kanakas; but even the babies crowed in response to the applause which followed these remarks, delivered with flashing eye and trembling voice: "This is an age when the sphere of woman's usefulness is widely increasing, and as the Roman and Spartan mothers made heroes of their sons, I do not see why Queensland mothers should not make politicians of their sons. Nevertheless, Mr. Meston is a very good and promising young member and clever enough for everything; yet he does not seem to have "struck ile" in this protectionist business. He piped most sweetly, but the people danced not. Mr. Rutledge, M.L.A., and Mr. W. Brookes addressed the meeting after the new president, but, at the best, there was an atmosphere of hopelessness about the whole affair. The association, in truth, have to begin at the very beginning, and by instruction convert their Queensland friends; by-and-bye, perhaps, when our manufactures have increased, and our population become enlarged in like ratio, they may see glimmers of success. At present the operations of the society excite no manner of interest outside a handful of men, many of whom do not look beyond the trades in which they are themselves engaged. There is no disposition to change the present order of things. If a vote were taken to-morrow in Parliament, I believe the result would be to retain the free trade brand, by which Queensland is supposed to be distinguished.

There has been a good deal of public agitation during the past week over a case heard in the police court. An esteemed and well-known colonist was locked up on a charge of "drunk and disorderly." The evidence against him was that of an Irish constable, who told two different stories, not one of which the public credit. It was evident that, whatever the arrested man's degree of "fou"-ness might be, if any, he could walk well and talk well. He knew what he was about, and demanded to be taken to the club where he was staying. This according to the policeman's own story. The case excited a good deal of interest in court, and the magistrates fined the defendant, though the policeman's oath had proved worthless, and though the gentleman with whom the accused had spent the evening—a respected Brisbane doctor—swore that his friend was not in the condition described by the constable. The defendant subsequently wrote to the papers explaining that he preferred a public investigation to forfeiting his bail, as he might have done, and reiterating his defence—namely, that he was merely sitting on a division of the bridge, smoking his pipe, when the Irish constable insolently ordered him to move on, and upon being told to mind his own business, collared him with the usual blasphemous threat to run him in. Another constable, appealed to on the way to the station, refused to assist. An outspoken correspondence has taken place in the newspapers, and other victims have recounted their experiences, showing that they were treated in the same manner as the defendant, but had preferred forfeiting their bail to public exposure.

The partial spoliation of the Darling Downs wheat crops by rust does not seem to have disheartened the farmers about Warwick and Allora. As I suggested some weeks ago, the ruin has not been by any means so bad as was represented. The mills, for example, at Allora have sufficient local wheat to keep going for two or three months, and though some of the grain is miserable produce indeed, there is a proportion of fairly good sample. It was very distressing at the period when the country should have been smiling with an abundant harvest, to see the crops reaped, not by sickle, or machine, but by the fire-stick. I was on the Downs at the time and saw several instances of this kind—farmers burning off their wheat and barley as utterly worthless. The main hope of the future, at present, is in a Californian variety of wheat, which comes to maturity early. The Darling Downs growers believe that if they could force the harvest a month or six weeks earlier than has been the custom, they would be no more troubled with rust. While, therefore, in other districts the small men are resolving to grow cane for the mills, upon the Downs, spite of reverses, the farmers are laying their lands down once more in wheat and barley, and doing their best to deserve the success they cannot command. The Government some time since ordered, through the National Association, a dozen bags of Meld's rust-proof wheat for seed purposes. This contribution to the crops of the future has arrived, and, already, seventy-five applications for a supply have been received. It is not without some cause that the Darling Downs are termed the Garden of Queensland. The climate is delightful, and the gardens produce English flowers and fruits that would be out of the question in Brisbane. Yet the fruit grower has a precarious time of it. If there are not creeping or flying pests, there are inopportune rains to spoil the produce at critical times. I saw loads of magnificent looking peaches bestrewing the ground, rotten and worm-eaten, fit only for food for pigs; grapes shrivelled and harsh; apples, pears, and plums shed from the branches before their time. The owner of an extensive nursery assured me that where he should this year receive a £100, he will be fortunate if he takes a £5 note. In these lower latitudes the pines, bananas, and grapes are, on the contrary, a good crop, though the vignerons would have been better pleased if the rain had kept off for another week.

A general rain has been, and is, falling throughout the colony. The Barcoo country, and other portions of the nearer west are out off from us by floods, and floods are, no doubt, imminent in the Moreton districts. The weather during the week has been no more than seasonable, it is true; but a seasonable Queensland February is not a thing to be desired, nor is Brisbane a nice city in wet weather at any time of the year.

Mr. Dillon and Miss Pender, at the Theatre, feel the effects of the rain as do all caterers for public amusement. It must be an extraordinarily important or attractive occasion that will tempt an audience out of doors during such gloomy, soaking weather as we are now enduring. We are hoping that the skies will be more friendly in March, when Madame Urso is to arrive.

A scientific journal says the cucumber is known to have been cultivated for more than 3000 years—that it was extensively grown in ancient Egypt. Perhaps it was the cucumber and not the asp that Cleopatra took to her bosom with fatal results. We always did doubt the snake story.

LAST QUARTER'S BIRTHS and DEATHS in SYDNEY.

During the three months ended 31st December, 1879—the Australian Spring—there were registered in the city and suburbs of Sydney 1971 births and 1114 deaths. The recorded natural increase of population in our metropolitan division was thus 857 in 92 days, at the rate of 3400 in twelve months of 365 days.

The resident population is estimated at 187,381 for the middle of last year—namely, 96,638 in the city, and 90,743 in the suburbs.

Based on these numbers the quarter's annual birth-rate was 41·7 per 1000; the death-rate 23·6.

The comparative death-rates in the suburbs severally, graduating from the lowest to the highest, were as follows:—

1. St. Leonards and Manly	14·9 per 1000
2. Paddington, Randwick, Waverley, and Woollahra	15·5 ,,
3. Newtown, Camperdown, M'Donald-town, and St. Peters	18·3 ,,
4. Balmain	20·7 ,,
5. St. Leonards and Manly	21·2 ,,
6. Glebe	23·0 ,,
7. Concord	24·9 ,,
8. Redfern and Darlington	25·7 ,,
9. Waterloo	28·7 ,,

The palm again belongs to St. Leonards and Manly, whose deaths have averaged only 14·9 per annum in each thousand of their inhabitants. The unenviable distinction of standing highest in the ascending scale belongs to Waterloo, whose deaths in the quarter have averaged for a year 28·7 in each thousand of its population, nearly double that of St. Leonards and Manly.

The quarter's numbers were as below:—

BIRTHS AND DEATHS IN THE SPRING QUARTER OF 1879.

Particulars.	Sydney City.	Sydney Suburbs.	Metropolitan.
Both Sexes:
The Quarter's Births	907	1064	1971
The Quarter's Deaths	644	470	1114
Births over Deaths	263	594	857
Males:
Males Born	458	566	1024
Males Died	359	235	594
Increase of Males	99	331	430
Females:
Females Born	449	498	947
Females Died	285	235	520
Increase of Females	164	263	427

The difference between the city and the suburbs, in their respective numbers of births and deaths, has been often noticed, but here it is perhaps more striking than ever. The births are more numerous in the suburbs than in the city by 157, while the deaths are fewer by 174. The natural increase is greater in the suburbs than in the city by 331. And then the numerical difference as to the sexes is curious: the males have increased more in the suburbs than in the city by 232; the females by 99.

The proportion of deaths to every 100 births was 71 in the city, but only a little over 44 in the suburbs.

The mortality of the quarter in comparison with that of the three preceding springs is shown in the subjoined table:—

MORTALITY OF THE SPRING OF 1879, COMPARED WITH THE AVERAGE OF THE THREE PRECEDING SPRINGS.

Particulars.		City.	Suburbs.	Metropolitan.
Deaths in the Spring of...	1876	469	318	787
	1877	537	359	896
	1878	553	408	961
Mean of the three...		520	362	882
Deaths in the spring of	1879	644	470	1114
Mean annual death-rate of the three Springs, 1876-1878		22·6	17·5	20·0
Annual death-rate of the Spring of 1879		26·4	20·6	23·5

The quarter's mortality has thus been exceptionally high in both places: in the city the deaths have numbered 124 above the three years' average; in the suburbs 108.

The mean death-rates of the three preceding springs were 22·6 per 1000 in the city, and 17·5 per 1000 in the suburbs; but in the past quarter they were respectively 26·4 and 20·6, an excess of 3·8 in the one case, 3·1 in the other.

THE WARDS.—The next table shows several particulars respecting the mortality of the Wards.

THE CITY WARDS IN THE SPRING OF 1879.

Wards.	Area in Statute Acres.	Population, 1879.	Persons to an Acre.	Deaths in the Quarter.	Annual Death Rate.
Total in the City	2,546	96,638	37·8	644	26·4
1. Gipps	163	11,599	71·6	53	17·6
2. Bourke*	292	6,862	23·6	132	76·4
3. Brisbane	108	9,471	87·7	44	18·5
4. Macquarie	189	10,340	54·7	44	16·6
5. Cook	761	19,037	25·0	98	20·4
6. Fitzroy	269	15,153	56·3	83	22·7
7. Phillip	340	10,630	44·5	85	32·6
8. Denison	433	13,143	30·2	97	29·8

* Including Sydney Infirmary.

The most favourable death-rate exhibited here is, as usual, in Macquarie Ward, 16·8 per 1000; the highest rate is in Bourke Ward (where the Infirmary is situated), 76·4 per 1000. The most densely peopled of the wards is Brisbane, whose inhabitants average 87·7 to an acre; the most thinly peopled is Bourke, 23·6 to an acre.

The numbers recorded in the several places during each of the last two springs are as below:—

BIRTHS AND DEATHS IN THE SPRING QUARTERS OF 1878 AND 1879.

Districts.	Population, 1879.	Births. 1878.	Births. 1879.	Deaths. 1878.	Deaths. 1879.
Metropolitan	187,381	1735	1,971	961	1,114
City	96,638	831	907	553	644
Suburbs	90,743	904	1,064	408	470

Comparing the numbers of the past quarter with those of the preceding spring, we find that while the births have increased so have the deaths, both in the city and in the suburbs. Such also has been the case in the Glebe, Redfern, Waterloo, Paddington, and Concord. In Newtown and St. George the births have decreased, the deaths increased. In St. Leonards and Manly the births and the deaths have both decreased.

The proportions of the numbers to the estimated population are shown in the table below:—

ANNUAL BIRTH AND DEATH RATES IN THE SPRING QUARTER.

Districts.	Birth Rate. 1878.	Birth Rate. 1879.	Death Rate. 1878.	Death Rate. 1879.

9. St. Leonards, &c.	46·6	39·3	18·4	14·9

The birth rate and the death rate have both increased in the city and in the collective suburbs. Within the city the quarter's births were in the proportion of 37·2 to each 1000 of its inhabitants; in the suburbs it averaged 46·5 per 1000.

The highest birth rate occurred in Balmain, and remarkably high it was, 61·8 per thousand; the lowest in Paddington, 38·7.

The quarter's mortality within the city was high, 26·4 per 1000; higher than in the preceding spring by 3 per 1000. The collective suburbs show a mortality of 20·6 per 1000, higher than in the corresponding quarter by 2·6, but lower than in the city by 5·8.

The highest death rate occurred in Waterloo, 28·7 per 1000, higher than in the previous spring by 8·1; the next highest was in Redfern, 25·7, an increase of 7·2. The lowest rate occurred in St. Leonards, 14·9; the next lowest in Paddington, 15·5.

CAUSES OF DEATH.—Zymotic diseases (epidemic and contagious) carried off 145 persons in the city, 103 in the suburbs. Of the zymotic class the most fatal was diarrhœa—51 in the city, 49 in the suburbs. Of typ

THE JANUARY MAGAZINES.

Blackwood has signalised the New Year by resuming something of the old lively vein which made the reputation of Maja. "A Turkish Effendi on Christendom and Islam" is a strong dose for our self-complacency, and it will do us no harm should we feel our teeth somewhat set on edge. We are inclined to believe, from internal evidence, that the essay is genuine—the writer neither more nor less than he professes to be. But, however this may be, when he tells us broadly that our modern Christendom, in its three great divisions, is so utterly unlike that proposed by Christ that it ought to be styled Anti-Christendom, we may well be startled into attention. He certainly hits us hard on the score of selfishness and idammon-worship, which are anything but Christian graces. Nor can we complain that Orientals should be galled by our Pharisaical boast of diffusing civilization when we are mainly intent on money-making. Still, when the Effendi objects to us as reformers we have a right to remind him that the reforms on which England insists are suited to the highest ethics of Islam as well as of Christendom, that they amount in fact to little more than decent justice between man and man, and an intelligent system of taxation instead of the extortion which impoverishes individuals to secure national bankruptcy. Our Stachelberg symposium " is another quaint article—slightly incoherent, but with here and there a touch of the wild rollicking fun of the "Noctes." The second part of "Bush-life in Queensland" truly justifies the hopes which we expressed on reading the first chapter. Whether the tale is ever to subside into an ordinary novel we cannot tell, but at present it is something far better and rarer; a faithful portraiture of real scenes and characters such as give a zest to colonial experience. As a matter of personal taste, we cannot feel strongly interested in the account of the "Roman Breviary." The thought of thousands and tens of thousands of ecclesiastics uttering or muttering—for every word must be formed if not spoken out—the entire Latin Psalter every week of their lives, strikes us as inexpressibly dreary. But it is interesting and cheering to see how much of spiritual earnestness our Anglican perverts have carried into their new allegiance. Lord Bate's translation of the entire "Breviary" into "a tongue understanded of the people may, and we trust will, prove a boon to the Roman Catholic laity; but no man reared under the Romish system would have felt the need of such a work, or cared to supply that need."

The article on on Mr. Gladstone's Pilgrimage is in its general tenour just what might have been anticipated. One point, however, the writer brings out with striking effect—the utter conflict between Gladstonian liberalism and the views of the old Whigs. If in 1874, Lord Russell wrote of Mr. Gladstone that he "disliked the extension of our colonies," and that "his measures would tend to reduce the great and glorious empire of which he was put in charge, to a manufactory of cotton cloth, and a mart for cheap goods," what must be the feelings of Lord Hartington and Earl Granville at the recent utterances of their ally?

In Fraser, the second instalment of the Duke of Argyle's "First Impressions of the New World," will be read with interest; especially the passages in which he speaks so hopefully of English agricultural prospects. He regards the present depression as quite of a passing character, as far at least as it is due to American competition. His reasons are much the same which have been ably put forward by Mr. Brassey. His delight in the novelties of the American flora and fauna is so enthusiastic that his readers can hardly refrain from sympathy, especially when he describes his first sight of that winged gem, the ruby-throated humming-bird. It is pleasant to be told that this lovely little creature might, as far as food and climate are concerned, live as well in England—or even in Scotland—as in Canada. But alas! the feminine demand for bright hues and surfaces seems to grow, as the natural supply is cruelly and wastefully reduced, and a bird so resplendent in its beauty is far more likely to disappear from Canada than to be acclimatised in Britain. Another article—the second of a series—is devoted to "What Shakspere learnt at school." But there is little new to be told us under this head, which is dwelt on so largely in the introductory treatises prefixed to various editions; notably, to that of Johnson and Stevens. That Ben. Johnson credited his friend with "small Latin and less Greek"—that the Latin, nevertheless, included an off-hand acquaintance with a considerable portion of the classics, and especially a fair knowledge of Ovid's works (for which he shows a decided penchant), are not very recondite facts. Mrs. Oliphant's "Earth-bound" is a pretty picturesque ghost story; not too horrible—indeed, not horrible at all. The unsubstantial heroine is quite charming. "A Type of the Renaissance" is principally devoted to the career of Andria del Sarto.

Macmillan strikes us as rather a weak number. "Life at high pressure" is a good subject, but enough is not made of it. The writer seems hardly to recognise the inferior quality of the work which is produced in prodigious quantities by the exercise of unresting energy. Lord Brougham, to whom he refers admiringly, is a case in point. He had an immense range of powers and acquirements; for many years he was writing whenever he was not speaking; yet how little of what he wrote will bear criticism! What have Mr. Gladstone's last three years of incessant speeches, pamphlets, and polemical letters done for the good of his country or for his own repute as a statesman? The human mind demands its Sabbaths—we want time to think and to mourn. Dr. Richardson's article anent Sir W. Trevelyan's whimsical bequest to him "On trust for scientific purposes" of a cellar of wine in some respects unique has been a good deal forestalled by the newspapers. It gives us, however, some interesting local details, and some curious particulars showing how long a pure but full-bodied wine will keep sound. But he gives us no hint of any probable use of his bequest; indeed, rather parades his inability to make up his mind. Meantime, the wine—some of it 120 years old, and at present worth twenty guineas the dozen, is of course going off day by day, and by the time that Dr. Richardson is prepared to abandon his tee-total crotchet will probably have lost half its value. There is a horrid Breton story of the last were-wolf (we must confess to having learnt from it for the first time that these fabulous personages are called "Bisclaverets") which we wish we had not read. The wild, picturesque superstition subsides into painful realities; between a suspicious wife and prying neighbours a luckless miner is done to death, and it is cold comfort that his wife is the first victim of her own folly. "Dust-heaps" is pleasanter as well as more profitable reading. The machinery for cleaning out dust-bins and disposing of their contents works so quietly that we need to be reminded of the toiling multitude—the majority women—who pass a cheerless and grimy existence in sorting and sifting the debris of half a million kitchens and coal-cellars. It was no common effort of female benevolence to reach the hearts of these dust-sifting drudges to gladden them with a glimpse of Nature's beauties and with the unfamiliar accents of Faith and Charity.

Belgravia contains the concluding chapters of "The Queen of the Meadow," which winds up cheerfully with a wedding. There is a good article on the old country towns of Cheshire and Salop. The former county deserves more notice than it receives from the artist and archæologist, being rich both in natural beauty and in historical associations. From its hills may be seen views of unsurpassed loveliness, farm-houses nestling among trees, extensive parks and meres, and some of the finest churches that England can boast. Whitchurch contains the grave of the great Talbot, with whose name French nurses used to hush their babes in the olden time. The infamous Judge Jeffreys was born at Wem, the manor of which he afterwards purchased. From the tower of Mucclestone Church, near Market Drayton, Queen Margaret watched the bloody fight in which Lord Audley fell. She fled from the scene of defeat with the horse's hoofs shod the wrong way to puzzle pursuers, and the direct descendant of the ingenious farrier who suggested this device was still following his ancestor's calling at Muccleton a few years ago. The curious old town of Northwich is so burrowed under by the salt mines that, in spite of wedges and props, every house seems nodding to its fall. A few years will probably see fulfilled one prediction at least of the Cheshire Prophet, Nixon, that "Northwich shall be a lake of the Weaver River." "Rousseau's Julie" (Madame Houdedot) must have had an exquisite charm of manners and mind to have fascinated two men of genius like Rousseau and St. Lambert. Plain and sallow in her youth, she was, according to Miss Edgeworth, shockingly ugly in age, yet gay, open-hearted, and pleasing to the last.

Temple Bar runs riot in fiction: we have only space to note that Mrs. Lynn Linton's new novel, "The Rebel of the Family," promises well. There is an amusing account of Theophile Gautier, poet, journalist, and art critic, whose sole religion was the worship of the beautiful, while his conception of beauty was, alas! purely material and sensuous. He must have had great social gifts to carry off his personal eccentricities. Few would be held privileged, as he was, to parade the Boulevards at the most fashionable hour in yellow slippers and black velvet waistcoat, bare-headed, with broad umbrella and locks that "stream'd like a meteor."

The Cornhill continues happy in its two novels, "White Wings" and "Mdme. de Mersac." There is an amusing sketch of the notorious "Fighting Fitzgerald" whose personal traits were the opposite of all we expect in a bully; a delicate, though handsome figure and face, mild address and engaging manners, with a touch of costly foppery in his dress.

The admirers of Antony Trollope will be pleased to find his name in All the Year Round, heading a novel entitled "The Duke's Children." The Duke is our old friend the Duke of Omnium, better remembered as the large-hearted though ungenial "Planty Pall." Dear Lady Glencora is dead—she could not be permitted to grow old—and her children, lively, spoilt, wilful and charming as they were sure to be, are giving the orderly and decorous widower some trouble. The heir gets expelled from Oxford for painting the Dean's Lodge a bright scarlet (a freak, by the way, which really belongs to Trinity College, Cambridge), and the younger brother follows suit at Cambridge for an escapade to the Derby. These things are gall and wormwood to his immaculate Grace; but we have confidence in Mr. Trollope's kindly nature, and feel sure that the lads will "full up" betimes and fill the father's heart if they do not satisfy his ambition. "No. 2, Melrose-square," is the ghastliest of ghost-stories, and should not be taken after a heavy supper for fear of nightmares. "Sweet Nelly," the Christmas story, gives some lively pictures of social doings in the time of Queen Anne.

The January number of "The Day of Rest" contains a "Memoir of Annie Keary," which will be read with melancholy interest by the many admirers of that gifted authoress. The writer, Miss Beata Francis, knew her intimately, and is a trustworthy witness not only to her intellectual gifts, but to the rare spiritual graces by which those gifts were crowned. We must learn to accept the true moral of such lives and deaths. "God doth not need either man's work' or his own gifts." It is idle to murmur that the early-ripe fruit is first garnered.

"LILY QUEEN VALSE," by Alfred Moul.
"This, the latest composition of a rapidly-rising young composer, is commendable alike for the genuinely musical treatment which distinguishes it, as well as the simplicity which places it within the reach of ordinary pianoforte players. The four themes and coda are original in the fullest sense of the word; they are gracefully melodious, the harmonies are in thorough accord with each subject, and a valuable feature is the rhythmical accent and swing of the value, which will please the danseuse and player and listener."—TELEGRAPH.

JOLLY TARS MARCH.—One of the best marches published for many years.
"Mr. Moul has been inspired with a very happy and decidedly humourous idea in the form of a spirited March. The time is lively and agreeable, with a certain spice of eccentricity in it which gives it a strongly-marked character. The rhythm is effective, the harmonisation high-coloured, and the effect is very showy for so easy a setting."—ARGUS. "Mr. Moul's latest effort is of a very superior character. Throughout the characteristic composition there flows a most taking and pleasing melody allied to a stirring accompaniment."—DAILY TELEGRAPH. "Displays the musicianly skill and practical hand of the composer, and possesses a decided and catching melody, which, once heard remains on the memory."—HERALD. Price, 2s; by post, 2s 2d.

TENDERS FOR THE CONVEYANCE BY STEAMER OF NEW SOUTH WALES ARTILLERY AND STORES.

TENDERS will be received at this office until noon of FRIDAY, the 19th instant, for the conveyance by steamer of the New South Wales Artillery and Stores, in the harbour of Port Jackson, for one year, upon the following terms and conditions, namely:—

The steamer must be capable of conveying 120 men, and daily such stores as may be necessary, between any wharf, in or near Sydney, and the Fortifications, on both north and south sides of the harbour, calling at such points both going and coming, as may be required.

Private passengers not to be taken without permission.

If required, for purposes extra than the trips above mentioned, to be employed as long as required, but not exceeding 24 hours at a time.

The contractor will be required to send daily (Sundays excepted) to Dawes' Point Battery, at 9 o'clock a.m. for instructions.

The steamer to run a speed of not less than nine knots per hour, and when damaged or otherwise unable to perform the work required of her, to be replaced by a boat of equal power and capacity.

In default of carrying out the work required, the authorities to have the right to hire any steamer available, and charge the cost thereof against any moneys that may be due to the contractor; and upon repetition of the same, the Government to have full power in at once terminating the contract on giving due notice.

Each tenderer must state specifically the rate per day of 24 hours, per trip, and on completion of the trip rate per hour for detention, for hire of the steamer, and also give the name and tonnage of the boat or boats he proposes to run.

No tender will be entertained unless accompanied by a certificate from two responsible persons, stating that they are willing to become bound as sureties for the due fulfilment of the contract, in the penal sum of £200.

In the event of the tender being accepted, the contractor and sureties must severally call at the Treasury to execute and deliver the bond within fourteen days after the date of acceptance, failing which the contract may either be advertised anew or another tender accepted.

Tender forms can be obtained at the office of the Ordnance Storekeeper, who will give any further information to persons desirous of tendering.

Tenders must be addressed to the Under-Secretary for Finance and Trade, and endorsed "Tender for Conveyance by Steamer of New South Wales Artillery and Stores."

Extract from POOR MAGAZINE (London), of 8th December, 1879, on the Sixth Quinquennial Report of the Society:—

"It is, as a whole, the most complete statement ever issued by a Life Company, and affords an incontestible proof that the tale of singular success it tells is the result, not of chance, but if practical and theoretical ability, governed by sound judgment and prudence. . . . An enormous sold income has thus been gathered together under serious drawbacks with respect to population and distance at a comparatively small cost."
